Bonner Plan 'Ruin For B.C.'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mike Jessen, president of the Scientific Pollution and Environmental Control Federation (SPEC) Saturday called for the resignation of British Columbia Hydro chairman Robert Bonner because his ideas could "cause unprecedented environmental, social and financial ruin to B.C."

Bonner has shown himself in a meeting with SPEC to be unwavering and single-minded in pursuing his belief that B.C. must prepare for a 9.2-per-cent annual growth rate in energy demand, he said.

The figure has been challenged by other government agencies but Bonner is unrelenting, Jessen said.

He pointed to Bonner's statements that the 30-per-cent difference between Hydro's 9.2-per-cent projection and the B.C. Energy Commission's seven-per-cent forecast "is the difference between the kind of life to which we have become accustomed and something near recession."

"Anything lower than that is near stagnation."

Jessen quoted numerous studies, including the federal energy department's latest policy paper to support SPEC's belief in the necessity of energy conservation.

Environment Minister Jim Nielsen, who spoke to the annual meeting, called energy conservation "a prime concern" but said that in his department "we really haven't addressed ourselves to that so far — there is no component in our department exploring that."

Bonner today defended Hydro's gross estimates for the next 15 years, saying it is easier to cut back if the estimates are high than it is to add on if they are too low.

He said it is difficult to anticipated how much it would cost to make up for underplanning.

10 For One Bloody Vow

BELFAST (UPI) — Protestant extremists claiming to have formed a new vigilante patrol say they will take to the streets and shoot 10 Roman Catholics for every member killed while protecting Protestant lives or property.

The Irish Republican army countered the news with a warning that "ruthless and decisive action will be taken against the originators of the patrol force."

Hope Over Air Pact

VANCOUVER (CP) — John Marshall, Pacific regional director of the Air Traffic Controllers Association, said Sunday that he is confident association members will approve a one-year contract with the Federal Treasury Board, as recommended by their national executive.

The proposed agreement calls for an 11 per cent wage increase and provides that the French-language issue at Quebec airports be delayed pending further study.

Results of the vote are expected to be known today.

Johnny Rutherford, remembering how a pit stop cost him a victory when last year's race was halted by rain after 455 miles, declined a visit to the pits Sunday and won the shortest-ever Indianapolis 500 automobile race. When racing was suspended at 255 miles, he had a 12.8-second lead over rival A. J. Foyt, who did make an untimely pit stop. Page 10.

Janet Guthrie, who failed to qualify for the Indy 500 but became the first woman driver to compete in the World 600 stock car race at Charlotte, N.C., fooled the male drivers Sunday by finishing in 15th place. Page 10.

Four Victoria athletes competing in the Canadian Olympic track and field trials at Quebec chalked up three second-place finishes and Murray Keating's triumph in the hammer throw. They did not reach qualifying standards for the Olympic Games but still have opportunities to make the Canadian team. Page 11.

Victoria Bates continued their big hitting and ran their streak in the Pacific Coast Men's Fastball League to 18 games with four weekend triumphs. Page 10.

But his off-line shot hit a thin metal post and bounced onto the green to set the stage for a birdie putt on the next hole that gave him a victory over grim-faced Hale Irwin. Page 14.

'A TERRIBLE NIGHTMARE'

Swiftsure Tragedy

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

It came out of nowhere, a wave that seemed as tall as the mast, looming out of the pitch black night.

The 46-year-old skipper, Wilbur Willard, saw it first.

"We've got to turn into this one," he shouted to Gordon Aigner, 49, and John Tonan, 29, working on the deck beside him. He yanked the tiller hard to starboard.

Too late. The 30-foot sloop lifted into the towering wave, then slid sideways into the trough.

"Hang on," Willard yelled to the four people in the cabin below — his wife, Marlys, Greg Griffis, 24, Dave Williams, 28, and Jody Martin, 24.

A second wave, as high, as menacing as the first, caught the boat on the beam and crashed through the cockpit.

Aigner put his arms around the mast and clung.

"The rudder . . . it's jammed," Hillard screamed as another wave broke over the boat and swept him from the deck. He is still missing and presumed drowned.

The next wave caught Tonan, knocking him into the sea, too.

That was how Griffis and Williams, two members of the all-Seattle crew, recalled events aboard the ill-fated Swiftsure racer Native Dancer off Bonilla Point, 60 miles west of Victoria, early Sunday morning.

In an interview in the Victoria General Hospital later that morning, they said it had all happened so fast, like a 'terrible nightmare."

One moment everything was normal. The next, chaos.

The impact of the waves dislodged the stove from the wall in the galley. A closet door and a bathroom door were ripped off their hinges. They said bolts in the ceiling gave way and cracks formed along stress points on the deck and sides.

Griffis was tossed face first into lifelines on the opposite side of the cabin. Williams grabbed a stancheon and held on. The two women were sent sprawling. There was water everywhere.

Trudeau listens to sailors' gripes

PM HEARS GRUMBLES FROM UNHAPPY TARS

ON BOARD HMCS RESTIGOUCHE (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau, in an hour-long session with about 100 enlisted men aboard this Canadian destroyer, heard complaints of personnel shortages, worn out equipment and boredom of carrying out routine fisheries patrols.

The complaints were voiced as the prime minister visited the main cafeteria during a tour of the vessel which took Trudeau and his family on an overnight voyage from the Queen Charlotte Islands to Powell River as he continued his five-day tour of British Columbia.

The men grumbled that there were not enough sailors aboard each ship and that the bureaucracy of the department of national defence never seemed to come up with quick solutions to their problems.

"Everything's always being studied," said one sailor.

"When can we expect an increase in manpower, sir?" asked another.

The prime minister said the government had decided to keep increases in defence spending within limits as part of the over-all fight against inflation. He said senior defence staff had set their priorities on capital expenditures.

Trudeau said further spending on naval equipment was "somewhere down the road."

"Generals aren't necessarily stupid," he said.

During the session with the men, Trudeau answered questions with phrases spiced with the odd salty adjective. He was told that "these kids are getting sick of doing fisheries patrols.

"A lot of guys joined the navy to travel and all we do is make fisheries patrols," said one.

"Were not going to spend $3 billion a year to send you guys on trips," retorted Trudeau. "If you want to go to Japan, I suggest you buy a plane ticket.

"We're not a world power. We don't have ships in the seven seas."

HERO DIES AFTER RESCUE

NEW YORK (AP) — Fireman Patrick Cleary climbed a 24-foot ladder to the third floor of a burning building Sunday to bring down a trapped child.

He went up again and rescued the child's anguished mother.

Then he collapsed on the sidewalk and died.

Deputy Fire Commissioner Stephen Murphy said Cleary had worked on two fires Saturday night before arriving at his last call. He had been out on three fires Friday night, as well.

Wage Curb Challenge Gets to Supreme Court

OTTAWA (CP) — A major constitutional case began today before the Supreme Court of Canada—a challenge to the legality of the federal Anti-Inflation Act.

At issue is whether the provinces or Ottawa have the right to legislate controls over income.

Legal decisions in the past have held that the provinces have the pre-eminent right under their constitutional jurisdiction over property rights, as designated in the British North America Act allocating powers between the federal and provincial legislatures.

But Ottawa argues that it has the power under the wide federal power to legislate for "peace, order and good government."

The federal government opened arguments today, claiming that Parliament was well within its powers under the BNA Act when it passed the legislation to impose pay and price controls.

The federal brief argued that inflation last October, when the legislation was introduced, amounted to an emergency on the scale of war or famine.

Justice Minister Ron Basford asked the court March 11 to give an opinion on the validity of the anti-inflation legislation.

The request came as secondary teachers employed by the Renfrew, Ont., board of education challenged an agreement by Ontario to allow the Anti-Inflation Board to decide what wage increases were acceptable for Ontario public employees.

Fire Out Of Control

Canadian Press

Light winds were expected to bring some relief later today to the Ignace area of Northern Ontario where a 47,000-acre fire continued to burn out of control.

Warm weather with temperatures between 25 and 30 C. continued today, although a drop of 10 degrees C. has been forecast for tonight.

Similar hot, dry weather contributed to the rapid spread of the fire, which started last Monday at Wintering Lake, near Ignace, about 160 miles east of Kenora.

BLAZE KILLS 3

POWELL RIVER (CP) — A family of three was killed early Sunday morning when fire destroyed a single-family dwelling at Gillies Bay on the west side of Texada Island. Killed in the blaze were Michael Hedley Evans, 32, his wife Barbara Lee Evans, 34, and her son by an earlier marriage, Allan Stesen Scarl, 11.

Ferry Strategy Under Wraps

Precise strategy of B.C. ferry unions in their dispute over layoffs and overtime was kept under wraps today pending resumption of talks with Labor Minister Allan Williams Tuesday morning.

Ferry crews have conducted strike votes — results of which has not been made public—and strike notice has been served effective as early as midnight tonight.

But according to union sources there is not likely to be interruption of service until the outcome of Tuesday's talks is known.

If there is agreement between the government and marine components of B.C. Government Employees Union as a result of Williams' intervention, it will mean compromise of the ferry authority's plan to lay off 420 members of ferry crews to achieve operating economies for the ferry system.

HARBOR BLOCKADE

VANCOUVER (CP) — Greenpeace and the Newfoundland Fisherman, Food and Allied Workers Union have finalized plans for a joint blockade of St. John's harbor to start in mid-June, says Rod Marining, vice-president of the Greenpeace foundation.

The two groups hope to stop foreign trawlers and draggers from fishing the continental shelf and pressure the Canadian government into declaring a 200-mile fishing management zone, open only to domestic fishermn.

Sonar Torpedo at Nanoose?

Details of a new sonar torpedo alleged to have been tested by the U.S. at Nanoose Bay were sought today in the House of Commons by Victoria MP Allan McKinnon.

The Tory member said on the weekend he would ask Defence Minister James Richardson what he knows about the testing of the sophisticated weapon called Captor, which sleeps on the ocean floor until triggered toward its target by the sound of an enemy submarine.

"There is no danger to anybody," McKinnon said today. "I'm just mildly surprised that the Americans would test a weapon as advanced as that in Canadian waters rather than at their own testing range."

The member said he understood the torpedo can be armed with a nuclear warhead and has the capacity of making more than one pass at a target should its first launch miss.

Canada and the U.S. have a joint agreement for the use of the underwater weapons range at Nanoose Bay, where conventional torpedoes have been tested for about 10 years.

McKinnon said he was not especially opposed to testing of the Captor at Nanoose, but he felt the Canadian public should have been informed of it by the defence department. He also thought Canadian waters might not be as secure, from the American point of view, as their own testing facilities off Florida.

An executive officer of the U.S. naval torpedo station at Keyport, Wash., Robert Melim, said he was not aware of the kind of torpedo referred to by McKinnon.

McKinnon said he had not confirmed whether Captor was being used at Nanoose, but he filed notice of his questions this morning at the defence minister's office.

KIDNAPPED GIRL FREE

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The Belgian ambassador's 16-year-old daughter, ransomed for $408,000, said she feels fine but during her four-day kidnapping "the feeling of being closed in bothered me."

Nadine Chaval was released late Saturday night by leftist guerrillas who took her from her father's limousine Tuesday as a chauffeur was driving her to school. The guerillas apparently had planned to kidnap the ambassador but he was not in the car that morning.

"Nadine Chaval is fine. She slept very well last night, and right now she's enjoying a glass of milk," said the girl, pretending to be an employee at the embassy when a reporter called Sunday. After admitting her identity, she said of her ordeal:

"I got to eat and drink, and I was all right, but what got to me most was the feeling of being closed in there, in that place . . . It was a medium-sized place, but the feeling of being closed in bothered me."

Ambassador Chaval suffered what has been variously described as a mild heart attack or a nervous breakdown when his daughter was abducted and was still in bed Sunday, but his doctor said his condition was not serious.

A friend of the Chaval family said Nadine was left by her abductors in the Lomas section of Mexico City, near the Turkish embassy.

Wave Sweeps Swiftsure Man Into Sea

"It was incredible," said Williams. "The wave literally swept you off your feet with a big whoosh."

Griffis said he staggered towards the cockpit in time to see Willard in the water about 30 feet downwind, kept afloat by a flotation jacket he was wearing, and "hollering" for help.

He said he threw out a life ring and a pole, and then a plastic flashlight. He tried to hurl a rope out to him, he said, but it got snagged in the boat's rigging. Then Willard disappeared from sight.

Griffis was aware Tonan had gone overboard but couldn't see him. Ten minutes before the wave hit, Tonan had changed into his scuba wetsuit because he was cold and it was raining.

The boat was ptiching wildly and there were fears it would sink at any minute, Griffis said.

The sails were cut, the anchor put out, and someone radioed for help. Griffis thought it was about 4:30 a.m. The rescue centre put the first distress call at 12:20 a.m.

Griffis said he and Aigner tried to reach the self-inflating life raft tied near the bow. They had loosened it and were about to inflate it when a wave caught it and carried it out to sea.

They scrambled into the cabin to get a pump to blow up the reserve liferaft. But the pump was lost in the upheaval. They tried to blow up the raft by mouth.

Then, said Griffis, they elected to stay with the boat and ride out the storm.

"Our only plan was to survive . . . we felt it was safer in the boat than in a raft," he said.

He didn't know how long they remained huddled in the cabin. It could have been 15 minutes. Perhaps it was an hour.

They could hear the surf pounding and realized they were close to shore. Finally they felt the keel scrape against the bottom and the boat edged up onto a sandy beach near the mouth of a small creek.

"Miraculously we had hit a flood tide . . . we missed the large rocks," Williams said.

They were waiting for the tide to recede when a U.S. Armed Forces helicopter spotted the boat and landed on the beach.

They emerged to tell their would-be rescuers there were two men missing and the helicopter took off and started to search for them.

The five survivors returned to the boat and, minutes later, heard a knock on the bow.

They peered out and came face to face with Tonan.

He told them he had come ashore about half a mile away after a harrowing experience in the churning, storm-driven waters.

Griffis and Tonan then went in one direction along the beach hoping to find the skipper. Williams and Aigner went in the other. Griffis said they found the life ring, pole and flashlight washed up on shore, but no sign of Willard.

"It was too dark and too stormy to see anything in the water," he said. So the searchers returned to the boat.

One of the survivors took a sail and made a lean-to out of branches while the others collected driftwood and built a fire.

At 9 a.m. a Canadian Forces helicopter landed and took them into Victoria where they were transferred to Victoria General Hospital for observation. Three horus later they were released after hospital staff dried their clothes and fed them a hot meal.

Before the devastating wave struck the boat, it had been a good race, Griffis said.

There was no warning although, he noted, the night had seemed darker than usual.

"As we found out later, we were dangerously too close to shore," he said.

"But Wilbur wasn't the type to risk his boat or the lives of his crew.

"He'd been in the Swiftsure three or four times before and knew the course.

"Sure he was competitive . . . but he wouldn't do anything risky."

Efforts are being made today to get Native Dancer off the beach.

And the search continues for Willard with little hope now he'll be found alive.

SOLIDARITY DAY

NANAIMO (CP) — The Canadian Union of Public Employees' provincial executive has declared next Monday as Solidarity Day here in support of a CUPE strike.

The executive also is calling on locals across B.C. to send representatives to Nanaimo to beef up picket lines in the seven-week-old strike here and in Ladysmith against the Mid-Island Employers Association. The union has asked the B.C. Federation of Teachers and the B.C. Federation of Labor not to cross its picket lines.

Island's Electricity Supplies Have Energy Boss Concerned

British Columbia Energy Commission chairman Dr. A. R. Thompson said today he is concerned about the security of Vancouver Island electricity supplies, which come mainly by way of cable from the mainland.

He said a break in the cables, could have serious results on the Island.

Thompson said the commission would be pleased to study alternative sources of power for the Island, including a nuclear power plant, if the question is referred to him by the provincial cabinet.

(Transport Minister Jack Davis, a director of B.C. Hydro, said he would have no immediate comment on the nuclear power question. Earlier, Premier Bill Bennett said conventional sources of power should be used before the government studies more exotic forms, such as nuclear power and harnessing the earth's inner heat.)

Thompson was commenting on a resolution passed by British Columbia Chamber of Commerce at Penticton on the weekend, urging that a study be launched into a possible nuclear power plant for the Island.

The resolution, presented by the Sooke-Jordan River chamber, noted that it would take six months to repair a power line cable from the mainland if one broke.

Most Vancouver Island power comes in cables from Tsawwassen to Duncan and moves up and down the Island by transmission lines. Freighters near Roberts Bank have bumped the cables in the past, putting some of them out of action.

B.C. Hydro proposes to lay additional cables to increase Vancouver Island's power supply and has investigated the possibility of adding a coal-fired thermal plant on the Island to produce more electricity.

Thompson said today he can understand the anxiety of many people on Vancouver Island who are concerned about what could happen if the cables are knocked out.

"I share their anxiety. Obviously, alternative sources of power must be found for Vancouver Island."

This need for alternative sources of power will increase as the demand for power increases on the Island, he said.

In 1971, B.C. Hydro, under chairman Gordon Shrum, launched a study into nuclear power for the Island and selected Port Renfrew, 40 miles north of Sooke, as an ideal site for a nuclear power plant. Nanaimo had also been considered following an energetic campaign by Nanaimo Chamber of Commerce for a nuclear plant there.

However, W. A. C. Bennett refused to consider nuclear power, a stand that was subsequently endorsed by NDP premier Dave Barrett.

The resolution from the Sooke-Jordan River Chamber of Commerce noted that Vancouver Island's power demands are growing at the rate of 12 per cent per year and the present cables are already operating at capacity. This additional needed power should come from a nuclear plant, the chamber said.

The resolution earlier was endorsed by a meeting of the Associated Chambers of Commerce of Vancouver Island.

The resolution urged an immediate study be launched but did not specify a proposed site for the plant on the Island.

Cowboy Reagan Heads for the Last Primary Roundup

By FRANK RUTTER
Special to the Times

PASO ROBLES, Calif. — Ronald Reagan is on the last roundup-to corral enough votes to become the Republican candidate for president.

He donned his white stetson and jeans and swung into the saddle astride "Mr. Spats" at the Circle P Ranch here, just like the old days when he was a star in Hollywood westerns.

"This is Reagan country," proclaimed the huge banner at a bar-b-q down the dusty hill from the rodeo, where a couple of thousand enthusiastic supporters were serenaded by Bull Dog Bivins (and his new country music)' and then by Ronald Regagan and his new music for the country.

"This is my home setting," the political cowboy said. "If they campaigned this way, I'd just stay campaigning."

But it is nealry the end of the trail. This is the last full week of the presidential primary campaign. And the former governor of California is riding all out.

To him, the man in the black hat is President Ford. Victory in California—the biggest state, with the most delegates to the Republican convention — is essential. The opinion pools put Reagan 10 percentage points ahead. But Ford has gained confidence from recent campaign victories, which have given him the overall lead in delegates.

In a sudden change of strategy, Reagan—who was to have spent the last week of the campaign in California, shooting for another Texas-style wipe-out of Ford—has decided to make one more venture eastward into less familiar territory.

The campaign ends when Californians vote on June 8. But there are two other important primaries that day, in New Jersey and Ohio. Reagan had written them both off, but now he is making a late run in Ohio. He will spend next weekend there before his final perfromance in Los Angeles.

His staff has calculated that he and Ford will each go to the Kansas City convention with around 1,000 delegates, virtually tied—just short of the 1,130 needed to win.

Even though Ohio is Ford country, Reagan hopes to pick up at least a few of its delegates, conceivably enough to make the difference.

It is not even certain, despite his lead here, that Reagan will win in California but he was confident as the grey dust swirled around the horses' hooves "Rancheros Ride' Saturday here in the rolling farm country about halfway between Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Reagan rode confidently, even though one of his hosts leaned across and whispered that Mr. Spats had been brought out of retirement for the occasion.

After watching real cowboys roping steers, Ragan rode the bar-b-q of beef, for which supportrs had paid $10 a head, and warned them that Ford's economic policies are stoking up the fires of inflation.

Reagan seized upon the latest cost-of-living increase,which doubled in April to an annual rate of 4.8 per cent—with wholesale prices up more than nine per cent. He also questioned the patriotism of Secretary of State Kissinger and charged Ford with a foreign policy that is "wandering without aim." He declared he would make the U.S. "so strong no other country could dare to challenge it." He reiterated his promise to reduce the size and power of the federal government.

Nations Approve Fair Price Plan

NAIROBI (CP) — A forum of the world's rich and poor countries ended early today with approval of a program of negotiations on commodities designed to ensure fair prices and market stability for the Third World.

The United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) voted in favor of a resolution urging that a conference to negotiate a $6-billion common fund to finance commodity buffer stocks be convened no later than March of next year.

The vote came during a tension-packed final plenary session of the three-week conference, when a clash between rich and poor countries over the resolution was narrowly avoided.

Informed sources said the United States, Britain, West Germany and Japan decided after behind-the-scenes consulations not to make a planned joint statement emphasizing their freedom to decide whether to take part in a negotiating conference on the fund. Major industrialized countries had opposed the fund.

No explanation was made for the switch in plan, but it was clear that such a statement would have provoked an angry reaction from developing countries, which has sought a firm commitment to the fund.

The endorsement of the commodity fund was the last of three defeats for the United States during the final session.

Earlier, a plan for an international resources bank presented in a major policy speech by U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger was defeated in a roll-call vote.

The proposal to give early consideration to the bank was submitted by Belgium on behalf of the non-Communist industrial countries, and was defeated by 33 votes to 31 with 44 abstentions and 45 absent.

The purpose of the bank would have been to stimulate the output of raw materials by channelling large-scale private investment into high cost resource projects such as mining in the Third World.

Readin', Writin' A Must

WASHINGTON (WP) — The Virginia board of education has voted to require students to prove they can read, write and perform basic arithmetic computations to graduate from high school.

In passing the requirements, to go into effect for the class of 1978, Virginia joined at least 16 other states that are attempting to make high school diplomas a meaningful indication of competency.

Evaluation of a student's proficiency could include a test of whether a student can do such things as read a newspaper article and interpret it correctly, read maps, and compute prices in a supermarket.

CONTEMPT HURLED AT CUSTER

NEW RUMLEY, Ohio (AP) — Indians defeated Gen. George Custer nearly 100 years ago at Little Big Horn in Montana, and Sunday they came to his birthplace to display a continuing contempt for him.

Demonstrators assembled in Custer's hometown to hurl insults and urine at a statue of the Civil War hero and Indian fighter erected by the Ohio Historical Society at his birthplace in this town of 150.

"This man is like Hitler to us," said Chamuzza Indian Bob Hosick, who heads the North American Indian Cultural Centre at Cuyahoga Falls. "Regardless of our tribes, we hate him."

For the most part, the protest was peaceful and, to the more than 200 curiosity-seekers who gathered to watch the protest, it was one of the biggest events in New Rumley in years.

About 50 Indians prayed, built fires and erected a makeshift teepee for a ritual sweat lodge.

"The sweating ritual is a means of purification," said Indian Charlie Joe. He said Custer's birth "desecrated the entire area around here, including the white people who live here, because of the things he did."

Building the sweat lodge of purification, he said, was a way of mending errors.

The urine-splashing episode came at high noon.

"It was urine from many Indian tribes," said Milton Fletcher. He said they "wanted to get the word across of our contempt for Custer."

Onlookers had mixed reactions about the protest.

"I never thought it would come to this," June Mansfield of nearby Cadiz.

MILLIONS WILL LIVE IN SPACE—SCIENTIST

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Space colonies of one million people supporting themselves by selling solar energy to the earth are envisioned by a space administration scientist.

Richard Johnson estimated it would take 25 years to build the first station, and predicted it would be 20 years before construction is begun.

The moon would be used as a temporary intermediate station that would provide soil for highly intensive farms within the space colonies, as well as ore for the construction of aluminum solar power stations, he said.

Inside, 151 acres of soil taken from lunar rocks could produce enough food for 10,000 people. Instead of the earth's maximum yield of 500 bushels of corn an acre, for example, space farm acres could produce 4,000 bushels of corn a year.

Cancer Kills Saucy Martha

NEW YORK (AP) — Martha Mitchell, a saucy defender of the Nixon administration who turned on it during the Watergate scandal, died today of a rare type of cancer of the bone marrow. She was 57.

Mrs. Mitchell, estranged wife of former U.S. attorney-general John Mitchell, had been admitted to Sloan-Kettering Memorial Cancer Centre here Sunday.

She had been under treatment for the disease, multiple myeloma, for several months, and was admitted to hospital after suffering heavy internal bleeding, her doctor said.

Dr. Klause Mayer said earlier in the evening that the former attorney-general had been notified of the seriousness of his wife's condition but did not visit the hospital. The Mitchells separated in 1973.

Mrs. Mitchell had been released from the hospital in January after treatment for the illness. On May 18, in a successful effort to win $36,000 in back alimony from her husband, she was described in court papers as "desperately ill, without funds and without friends."

She became well-known as a caustically outspoken cabinet wife during Richard Nixon's first presidential term and merely to say her first name evoked instant recognition.

"Give 'em hell, Martha," Nixon once said after one of her many extreme defences of his policies.

Mrs. Mitchell, a small-town girl from Arkansas, was heard on everything — Vietnam, busing, Supreme Court nominations, Communist China.

In an administration full of soft-spoken, diplomatic officials and their wives, she became the Harry Truman of the day, not waiting for reporters to call her, but waking a selected few at home late at night.

'Only then - Vice-President Spiro Agnew was equally outspoken, but his speeches were part of a White House-planned political strategy, unlike Mrs. Mitchell's spontaneously delivered opinions.

"I don't have any friends here in Washington but the press," she said in 1970 at the peak of her popularity.

"They are the only people I really know. I get so lonesome I call my old friends in New York whenever I can."

Her popularity fluctuated after she left Washington and her love affair with the press waned. A reporter seeking Watergate comment from Mitchell was struck on the head by Mrs. Mitchell outside her Manhattan apartment in June, 1973.

"You have no right to be here infringing on my privacy," she said after throwing the doorman's hat at the reporter.

Last year, she hosted a local Washington talk show for a week to mixed reviews.

In March, 1975, Mrs. Mitchell said her days as a public figure were numbered.

"I'm tired of being castigated, of being thrown down the drain," she said. "It strains me, it takes all the blood out of my body even talking with you all."

Doctor Switch Set for Karen

WASHINGTON (WP) — The parents of comatose Karen Ann Quinlan have arranged to replace her present physicians with a seven-member medical team if another hospital or nursing home can be found that will accept her as a patient.

The Quinlans have tried unsuccessfully for the past two months to reach an accord on their daughter's care with Dr. Robert Morse and Dr. Arshad Javed. They apparently have steadfastly refused to implement a historic New Jersey Supreme Court decision that would allow them to withdraw the life supports that have sustained the 22-year-old woman through more than 13 months of coma.

Dr. Joseph F. Fennelly, spokesman for the new physicians, said, "We would expect all involved — doctors, hospital and family — would maintain the usual standards of nutrition and do all possible to alleviate pain and suffering."

Quinlan is now at St. Clare's Hospital in Denville, N.J., where she has been for most of the past 13 months.

Habitat Can Help

The cynics and doubters will joke that the only way in which the undeveloped world's shelter crisis will ever be solved by such gatherings as the UN Conference on Human Settlements, or Habitat for short, is if all the press releases, printed speeches and wealth of paper which accompanies any such ponderous endeavor are pasted together to form four walls and roofs for the millions of homeless.

Their argument is that no amount of talking ever got one house built, or one well of clean water dug, and the money spent on the conference, which got under way in Vancouver today, would be much better spent on bricks and mortar.

The truth of it is that the bill for Habitat (Canada is putting up $14 million as host country and delegates are probably spending at least that much of their own countries' cash to get here) is an infinitesimal part of the effort that is actually required to provide a decent environment for the world' poor.

They would be more accurate if they said that the real test of the developed countries' intentions to tackle these problems is not going to come at Habitat, where it seems delegates and observers will be talking mostly about windmills and methane cookers, solar power and plastic houses, but at Unctad IV.

This is the UN Conference on Trade and Development in Nairobi, meeting at the same time as Habitat. Simply stated, it's going to be talking about the major conflict in the world today, as a European journal put it: "The west needs raw materials. The third world has them."

The latter is demanding a new economic order, a more equitable redistribution of the world's wealth, indexing of commodity prices to the prices of industrial goods and a moratorium on third world debts to the industrialized nations totalling some $30 billion, among other things.

The responses of the industrialized nations (the U.S., Japan, Britain and West Germany are all opposed to the third world demands; Henry Kissinger instead proposes a resource bank funded with $2 billion to make loans to third world nations for which raw materials would be the collateral) at Unctad IV should provide a more accurate barometer of progress towards solving the problems to be outlined at Habitat. Polluted water, denuded forests, eroded crop lands, shoddy slum housing are all environmental problems but they require political and economic solutions.

But Habitat is hardly irrelevant. It is primarily a media event, in the fullest definitions of the word. It will focus attention and dramatize the above-mentioned environmental problems. Just holding the conference in Vancouver, a richly-endowed and comparatively wealthy urban centre, will do more then any television news film of starvation in the Sahel or slums in South America for "consciousness raising" among us affluent North Americans.

Habitat also will develop new lines of communication among official delegates and non-governmental groups from around the world who are concerned with providing a better human environment. And things are not all black. Each country is bringing an audiovisual presentation on its problems — and solutions. New devices, new technologies may be applicable elsewhere.

Most of all, the UN desperately needs to make a success of Habitat, to show increasing numbers of doubters that such an unwieldy international forum can be relevant to real problems, can provide an equalizing force between wealthy nations and underdeveloped, the comfortable and the deprived.

Barbara Ward, who wrote The Home of Man, Habitat's main working paper, said in a speech last month in Vancouver:

"We will survive as a human community only if we can see the needs of others, and only if we will keep power — including our own powerful desires — under some restraint and under some rule of law."

That, essential, is what Habitat should be about.

Wallace Was Naive

Tory leader Dr. Scott Wallace is absolutely right when he terms Socred attempts to smear him as "gutter-snipe." James Chabot (SC—Columbia River) said in the legislature that Wallace was pushing for the Douglas-Mackenzie site for a new regional hospital because one of the owners was his personal friend, Fraser McColl.

Wallace is hardly alone in favoring the site as the best one. How many studies, how many hospital planning commission meetings, went into that agonizingly slow decision-making process — a decade at least — before it was finally winnowed out? The new government is being penny-wise and pound-foolish, and will probably end up paying just as much for the other site and the finished hospital because of the delays.

We know there's no love lost between the Socreds and Wallace, but Chabot's kind of insinuation is descending into the same sort of tactics the supposedly new-look Social Credit party attacks the official opposition for — guilt by association and sly innuendo.

As for Wallace, he was remiss in not stating plainly his situation regarding McColl and the hospital site before. He could have neatly punctured the phoney sanctimony of the Socreds by telling the legislature that, yes, McColl was a Tory executive, a friend and confidante and sometime advisor, and he had a pecuniary interest in this property, but I agree with the independent advice of the planners and medical minds . . .

In politics, nothing should be taken for granted. Wallace has a reputation for plain-spoken honesty and sincerity but even he should not have been so naive as to expect his connection with McColl to go unnoticed in the hospital site debate.

CLC: Dumb But Also Foxy

QUEBEC CITY — Collectively, the leadership of Canadian labor either is ox-like in its dumbness, or is fox-like in its canniness. The performance of the Canadian Labor Congress here allows no room for conclusions in between those extremes, except perhaps that both qualities exist in uneven quantities.

By the end of a week in the Hilton Hotel's bowels — capacious ones, lined for the occasion with rude signs about wage and price controls — the 2,400 delegates had managed to, and at least as much had been managed into:

a) Committing themselves to a national general strike, probably in the fall except that just possibly it may not be held at all, even though not a single delegate I interviewed believed that the gesture would frighten the government into abandoning controls, and did believe that it would enrage the public and would cost unionists up to $50 million in lost wages.

Back to Table

Dumb? Yes and no. The executive's request for authority to call a general strike, "if and when needed" headed off militants among the autoworkers, steelworkers and public employees union who wanted to mount the barricades the day after tomorrow.

The resolution's wording also was bold enough that it will force organized labor, as autoworker head Dennis McDermott put it, "to get off our easy, emotional rhetoric and get down to hard organizing. If we flub a general strike we'll be picking up the pieces for 20 years."

b) Allowing congress president Joe Morris to announce that he would, in mid-June, resume talks with the government although Labor Minister John Munro had reiterated the government's "unequivocal commitment" to controls and although Morris only two month ago pulled labor representatives off tri-partite bodies like the Economic Council and Canada Labor Relations Council in order to pressure the government into dismantling controls.

What would these discussions be about, reporters asked Morris. "That's what we will discuss when we get to the table." Discuss what? "Discuss what we should be discussing."

An unwise tactic, because to go back into open-ended talks with the government blunts the edge of labour's outrage against controls. A wise tactic at the same time, however, because if a general strike becomes unavoidable the meeting can be used to help convince the public that labour isn't always so pig-headed that it would prefer to war than to jaw.

Also, Morris, who consistently has been the moderate among labor leaders, now has created the opening, although it is the slimmest one imaginable, for some kind of face-saving formula to be concocted that would allow government to claim it had saved the controls program and labor to claim it had forced major concessions, such as tougher action to hold down prices.

c) Approving an economic "manifesto" that lurched its way from ritual rhetoric about "creating a more equitable and just society" through to a paragraph of downright gibberish about "social corporatism" (delegates changed the phrase to "social democracy," as if the two concepts bore the slightest resemblance to each other), and on down to the crunch demand for labor to be handed "an equal share in economic and social decision-making" with business and government.

Foolishness, propped up by pretension. Only governments represent all the people, and are responsible to all of them. The congress represents just one-fifth of the labour force (2.2 million members among 10 million working Canadians) and is responsible to even these only in the limited, though critical, area of industrial relations.

A Real Movement

Clumsy a good deal of the time, but at times also clever — it's too soon to judge the proportion of each — the congress' seven days in May were among the most important in its history. By comparison with its counterparts in Europe, organized labor in Canada has always been unambitious and unsophisticated. It has played at the fringes of politics. Brave new notions like "industrial democracy" and "co-determination" have bounced over its head.

Today the movement is struggling to cope with change, or at least to understand it. The catalyst for this, which is often the way things work out, has been its own self-defined enemy.

"Trudeau kicked us in the ass with controls," comments McDermott. "If only we can use the kick in the right way we're going to benefit from it. We're going to get ourselves a real national labor movement."

Trappers' View

We were advised last week that trapping regulations will require that trappers on registered traplines have to inspect their leghold traps at intervals not to exceed 72 hours and that private property trappers would have to inspect their leghold traps on a daily basis.

As president of the B.C. Registered Trappers Association, and after consultation with available directors, I strongly protest such regulations that automatically deprive trappers of much of their livelihood.

Surely the affect such regulations will have on the direct income of trappers has not been considered very thoroughly. In effect, regulations impose a complete ban on the use of leghold traps, thereby rendering them as obsolete instruments or devices.

This regulation would make it impossible for a trapper to use a leghold trap unless he is prepared to subject himself to becoming an unlawful citizen of this province.

A trapper would be required to inspect his traps at fixed intervals and any fixed interval is strictly prohibitive. A trapper could have complete confidence that he would inspect his traps daily or at a fixed interval, but weather conditions, sickness and many other unforeseen things could make this an impossibility and therefore automatically subject him to a penalty.—Joseph S. Carty, President, B.C. Registered Trappers Association.

Wonderful

Please accept my thanks for the wonderful news coverage given in the Times May 19 (Seattle Group Honors Victoria Watercolor Artist).

As promised it was well written and correct factually.

It is interesting to note how many people that I have spoken to in the past day or so who have seen your piece on my painting, and have remarked on it. The power of the press is truly awesome, hope it never has anything bad to report about me.

I sincerely thank you for your work on my behalf, and the Times for publishing it. — Ardath Davis, 2025 Paul's Terrace.

Northwest Territories trapper Howard McIntosh in —45° storm.

Trap Teeth

With your help I will direct these lines to all environmentalists.

Our present British Columbia government is thumbing their noses at us by announcing that the leghold traps will have the teeth removed, this is nothing but a red herring in an attempt to cool us down, taking the teeth out of the traps will not put an end to the terrible agonies the animals have to suffer, their legs will still be shattered and the animals will continue trying to chew the leg off.

This government says there will be a time limit on how long an animal will be held in a trap, so I ask this question. Who is going to police all of the trap lines? The game department does not have the manpower and if a large number of wardens are hired then my answer is: don't hire wardens but use the money instead to pay welfare to the trappers until they can find other employment. This of course means the abolition of the ultimate in cruel devices.

This government proves how callous it can be because they have added wolves and coyotes to the trapping list. In addition to this, they have said nothing about the snares which are equally as cruel as the traps.

Now is the hour for the four Ls: love, life, let live. — Ray Johnson, 1174 Trans-Canada Highway.

Healthy Law

When I first became aware of the inevitability of seat belt legislation I, too, dreaded this Orwellian nightmare. Although it is supposed to be good for me I loathe the prospect of being strapped into an automobile. But I finally had to acknowledge the many good points of the proposed law.

First of all, our leaders have created — out of thin air — a brand new crime, and with present-day thinking, where you have a crime you have an income. Any roadblock will turn into an instant mother lode of fortunes as we beltless drivers will get fined again and again. The dollars will hire more policemen to set up more road blocks to produce more profit to hire more policemen. A truly sophisticated way to reduce unemployment.

And there are the statistics, and statistics don't lie. If for no other reason, the simple fact that seat belts are healthy should give our government carte blanche to enact anything they fancy. In fact, this law alone does not go far enough.

Since statistics are infallible it is obvious that our law givers have to bestow that most wonderful of all laws. Jogging around the block will wipe out accidents for good.

Some Japanese manufacturers are rumored to be designing sealed electronic pedometers, and with those things strapped around our legs we will all jog into the dawn of a foolproof society.—Wilf Wlochal, 310 St. Lawrence Street.

Share the Eggs

It is always interesting to observe the follies of our species. The first logical planner was Plato who quite simply showed how men should behave and laid down the rules for ideal government and an ideal community life The ruler or politician and everyone else had to be trained for his job. Sir Thomas More had a similar idea in his Utopia. Both More and Plato have long been a part of intellectual Great Britain so it would seem to be logical if one became committed to a planned life that we should consider carefully the thoughts of these two great men.

But behold! The unions run the government and the politicians take over business. The resultant mess is not surprising. What is surprising is that socialists in Canada propose to make exactly the same mistake. Every man who has a trade or a specialized skill or profession knows the absolute necessity for long and careful training. Surely even to simple minds it must be apparent that it would be better to leave business to those who understand it and thus not lose all the production which we need for a decent standard of living.

Without production all we would have to share is poverty. With production assured, labor, business and government each doing their own thing, which they can do well, can then sit down together and devise a fair and equitable division of all production. This may appear too simple, but what is your alternative? If anyone but experienced people attempt to run the industrial machine they will surely fail. Consider the plight of Great Britain and the U.S.S.R. which cannot even feed itself.

Every man to his trade and divvy up afterward seems to be a much saner way of achieving social justice and a decent life for all. Why kill the goose that knows how to lay the golden egg? Keep him laying and happy and share his eggs fairly after they are laid.—M. P. Paine, 3620 Quadra Street.

Biological Cures

The article Arthritis 'Cures' Rapped in the Times May 19 by Dr. George Price is a sincere letter showing how much Dr. Price needs to come along with the practice of biological medicine — the healing science of the future! That science knows the cause of rheumatoid arthritis and the therapy that will cure it. The chief exponent of biological medicine, Dr. Paavo Airola, in his book How To Get Well leaves nothing to doubt for the 60 diseases listed therein. How To Get Well is the best book ever published and every one of it's 303 pages is worth $8.95, the purchase price of the whole book.

Dr. Airola is constantly holding out his hand to orthodoxy saying all types of procedure are needed, and I am saddened by the resistance by the medical profession to different healing techniques, which is almost frightening. The determination by the medical world to avoid investigating other methods, and their refusal to reveal the truth is so significant that one is forced to the belief that in general doctors are worried about their sovereignty and the continuance of the material comforts their profession brings them.—Hugh F. Hoag, 740 Middleton Street.

Iceberg Government

At an all-candidates meeting in Sooke prior to the December election Lyle Kahl, the temporary MLA for Esquimalt, stated that a Socred government would change some of the evil things that the NDP government had done during its term in office. During the subsequent question period Mr. Kahl was asked how a Socred government would go about making these changes. As he didn't have a ready or prepared answer Dr. Kahl, in a very flippant manner, answered by saying: "Just watch us".

Well, Mr. Kahl, we are watching, and most of us, including many who were duped into voting Socred, don't like what we see. The next three or four years can't go too quickly for Esquimalt constituents and British Columbians as a whole.

This present government has introduced some necessary positive legislation, but the list of negative legislation for people grows daily. We all know that prices had to go up in some areas, e.g. ICBC, ferries, etc. — these we can live with. What is most dangerous to people is what they are doing and what they are going to do that is not readily apparent to the average citizen, e.g. concessions and favors to large corporations and wealthy party supporters, which the people eventually pay for. Let us beware that to court this iceberg government is fraught with danger. Let us not be fooled by the fence (snow fence) mending job that is come later. — W. Stott, Box 672, Sooke.

Why Should We Not Take Freedom?

By MICHAEL T. KAUFMAN

UMTALA, South Africa — There is an air of urgency to the preparations that are moving ahead speedily for the independence of the Transkei Territory, a move that the South African government hopes may yet persuade the world that it is sincere about separate development of black Africans.

While black African countries call that independence an elaborate sham and vow never to recognize the state which is the designated homeland of the Xhosa people, the government is donating hundreds of millions of dollars toward its growth and in effect putting its money where its ideology is.

And as construction crews work through the night here under the glare of spotlights hurrying to complete the twin 12-storey government complex by Oct. 26, the issue of Transkei independence is focusing debate within South Africa on the course of separate development generally. It is a debate whose tone has been heightened and made more urgent by events in Angola and Rhodesia.

For independence is a culmination of South Africa's separate development policy. Ever since that policy was first formulated by the then Prime Minister Hendrik Verwoerd, who said, "We want each of our population groups to control and govern themselves," the more rational exponents of separate development have insisted that their country is in fact prepared to cede territory and sovereignty to the various groups of developing peoples.

The underlying assumptions of this policy — at least those that South African leaders talk about — are that South Africa is composed of many ethnic and tribal groups, each with its own culture and traditions, and that the whites, themselves divided into English and Afrikaans speakers, are dominant by dint of the technology they have harnessed.

It is argued that a political assimilation of these groups now could result only in the destruction of the attainments of the dominant culture.

The South African theoreticians of separate development contend, therefore, that what is necessary is a program in which the evolution of nonwhite people is encouraged so that parity can be approached. Then, once these component groups gain equal footing, consolidation or integration, perhaps through an economically interdependent federation, can be achieved.

This, of course, is putting the best possible face on separate development, and its exponents agree that in terms of international debate their position is eroded by other assumptions widely held in white South African society: that white supremacy is religiously ordained or that the great wealth of the country requires an enormous pool of relatively cheap black labor.

For them, the independence of the Transkei represents a gamble by which they hope to convince hostile world opinion that white South Africans are not racist repressors committed forever to maintain domination over the black minorities.

Meanwhile, challenges to the policy are being raised as the Transkei independence nears, not just from liberals, but from members of the ruling Nationalist Party as well. How independent can the Transkei be when half its male population works in the mines and industries of South Africa and when its government will continue to depend largely on South African donations and loans? And what of those other homelands, whose leaders have already rejected independence? And what of the Indians and coloreds (people of mixed ancestry), ethnic minorities that have no homelands and no political power? Finally, what of the urban blacks who have not rushed back to their homelands?

Perhaps the most articulate presentation of the issues can be seen in the disagreement between the leadership of the Transkei, which has welcomed self-rule and independence, and that of the Zulu homeland, Kwazulu, which has denounced the balkanization of South Africa and rejected independence.

Chief Kaiser Matanzima of the Transkei has argued that his people have been prepared gradually for independence with a parliament, educational opportunities and a civil service groomed by the South Africans. Other Africans, he said, "have fought hard struggles for independence, why should we not take it just because it has been offered?"

As to the criticism that the Transkei was doomed to remain economically dependent on South Africa, he did not deny this.

"That is a fact of life, but so are Lesotho, Swaziland and Mozambique economically dependent on South Africa," he said.

He insisted that such dependence and the admitted great paternalism of South Africa would not inhibit his country's autonomy. He said he thought a Transkei could act as an agent of change in South Africa.

"For instance, we could, in fact, we plan to make representations to South Africa that our citizens working there should be treated no differently than Frenchmen or Dutch people," he said, adding, "I do not think it will work but we could even ask our men not to work in South Africa unless they change their ways."

Matanzima would not comment on reports that the Transkei Constitution, now being drafted by black legislators with the assistance of South African lawyers, would retain the South African Immorality Act, which outlaws sex between whites and blacks. Nor would he discuss the report that all white schools would be preserved for the children of South African civil servants.

In the transitional stage, when all ministries except foreign affairs and defence have passed to the Transkei people, the hotels in this capital are still segregated, five white and one black.

The opposing view on independence is that put forth with increasing frequency and emphasis by Chief Gatsha Buthelezi, the elected leader of the Zulu homeland. The Zulus are the most populous of the South African Bantu peoples, with the Xhosa second. Speaking to 16,000 people in the black suburb of Soweto on the anniversary of the Sharpeville massacre of 1960, Buthelezi drew great cheers recently when he declared:

"South Africa is one country. It has one destiny. Those who are attempting to divide the land of our birth are attempting to stem the tide of history."

Buthelezi urges instead that political and economic opportunities be opened up in all South Africa for all people.

And in white South Africa, the debate between the two chiefs also has its echoes. Recently voices in the Nationalist party, realizing that the separate-development timetable may have been sidetracked by events in Angola and Rhodesia, have asked for the opening up of economic institutions to blacks, Indians and colored. There have been calls for equal work and the expanded rights of nonwhites to organize trade unions.

A Time Bomb On the CBC

THE GLOBE AND MAIL
An Editorial

The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation may be about to drop a bombshell into a highly controversial Canadian situation. A situation which has tortured political and economic circles in this country ever since Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau suggested at the year-end that he was considering the introduction of a "new society" which would impose a lot of permanent controls on Canadians.

Starting next March the CBC will present John Kenneth Galbraith in a 13-part series of hour-long television programs entitled "The Age of Uncertainty: World economics, a testament for the future of mankind." The series will be co-produced by CBC, TV Ontario, the United States Public Broadcasting Service and the British Broadcasting Corporation.

What makes it peculiarly interesting for Canadians is that John Kenneth Galbraith is the highly controversial economist whose work has prompted Mr. Trudeau's thought and, it must be suspected, his plans for his "new society". Mr. Trudeau himself said in his December summing up, "I'm not as wise and as experienced as Galbraith but there's no doubt that his thinking has permeated my thought and that of a lot of other people."

Simon Reisman enlarged on that in April. In his first speech after resigning as Canada's deputy finance minister, Mr. Reisman said, "The Prime Minister and some of his ministers appear to have been profoundly influenced by Galbraith's system of ideas and to some degree at least have been acting or are contemplating action in accordance with them." This so disturbed Mr. Reisman, who considers the Galbraithian theories both impractical and dangerous, that he threw away the speech he had been intending to make and spoke instead on "John Kenneth Galbraith—Messiah or False Prophet".

Many respected Canadian economists agree with Mr. Reisman in rejecting Galbraith as a false prophet whose theories, if implemented, would lead to a grave loss of freedom for Canadians. In fact, there is no middle ground about Galbraith. People are strongly for him or they are strongly against him.

Knowlton Nash, director of information programming for CBC, claims the series "is not a platform for Galbraith's point of view". He says, "It is an eclectic and thoroughly witty look back at the history of economics, going back to Adam Smith, to the age of capitalism." He has not seen all the programs because so far the filming reaches only "up to about post-World War One".

Those economists who disagree with Galbraithian theories, and view with horror the thought of Mr. Trudeau's bringing them to life in Canada, may doubt the fairness of Mr. Galbraith's presiding on the national network over 13 hours of economic history. They may feel that history is seldom uninfluenced by the views of its interpreters. They may hold that the Galbraithian opposition is entitled to view the programs and perhaps to ask for equal time to present what might turn out to be the other side.

What is under discussion is not just theory, but possibly imminent practice. The opposition could have a point.

Thorpe: Political Failure Was Factor Too

By ADAM RAPHAEL
London Observer

Jeremy Thorpe is the latest of a long line of British politicians — ranging from the 19th century radical Charles Dilke, who was found in bed with two women, to John Profumo, who lied about his relationship with a prostitute — to fall foul of that double standard of morality which insists that those who aspire to govern must lead conventional personal lives.

Thorpe's political future always looked uncertain since that January day in a Devon Court when a former male model, Norman Scott, took advantage of a legal privilege to claim that he had once had a homosexual relationship with him.

The Leader of the Liberal Party denied that accusation flatly then and his denials, though much challenged, still stand today with only the inconclusive evidence of affectionate letters to Scott against him. What has brought him down is not so much the unproved charges of homosexuality but the actions of some of those he chose to trust. If ever a man had reason to repeat Voltaire's cynical comment: "God protect me from my friends," it is Jeremy Thorpe.

Not much needs to be said about Norman Scott, the young man whom Thorpe befriended and helped in the early 1960s who subsequently turned on his protector. By any standards, and however charitably one treats him, he is an unstable man.

But Scott could not have brought Thorpe down without the help of two more "friends", Peter Bessell, the former Liberal MP for Bodmin, and David Holmes, a Manchester merchant banker and former deputy treasurer of the Liberal Party. It was their hush payments to Scott, totalling thousands of pounds, which Thorpe has always denied knowledge of, that undermined the Liberal leader's credibility within the party.

With "friends" like these, it did not need the meddling of foreign agents, South African or otherwise, to achieve Thorpe's downfall. Sir Harold Wilson, just before he resigned as prime minister, lent his considerable authority to the theory that the Liberal leader's troubles had been engineered by South African sources. But not a shred of reliable evidence to support this frankly incredible charge has emerged apart from the blunderings of

. . . errors of judgment

Gordon Winter, a South African reporter, on the fringes of the story.

What has emerged beyond dispute is that Thorpe's errors of judgment have not been confined to his choice of friends. By an odd quirk of fate, the day that Norman Scott made his allegations in court, a Department of Trade report was published which criticised Thorpe's conduct as a director in the London and County Bank failure.

In his bitter resignation statement, Thorpe attributed his resignation to a sustained witchhunt by sections of the press and the open attack on his integrity by a fellow Liberal MP, Richard Wainwright. The bitterness was understandable but it did little justice to either himself, his colleague, or to what actually happened. Thorpe always said he would resign when he no longer had the confidence of his parliamentary colleagues and it must have been crystal clear to him that he had lost this.

In the end it was as much his lack of success as a political leader as anything else that brought Thorpe down. Whether any other Liberal politician could have done better is open to doubt but the only sure defence for the leader of a party is electoral success. And that remained just out of Thorpe's reach. After nine years as leader of the party, he doubled its electoral vote to more than five million at the last election but the promised breakthrough never arrived. In October 1973, the Liberal vote declined from the peaks of February and only 13 MPs were elected, one more than Thorpe had inherited from his predecessor Jo Grimond, who returns as leader — if only as a caretaker.

Since then the public opinion polls have shown a steady decline in support for the Liberals and the recent disastrous spate of blood-letting appears only to have quickened the trend. Even without the Norman Scott charges, Thorpe's position as leader was bound to have been vulnerable.

Despite his undoubted qualities as a campaigner and popularity in the constituencies, many of his parliamentary colleagues did not hide their dissatisfaction at his barnstorming tactics which seemed to reflect showmanship rather than political substance. David Steel, despite his close association with Thorpe, has blamed the Liberals' failure on the party's inability to decide what terms it was prepared to accept as the price of coalition. That chance came briefly in February 1974 when Edward Heath sought to save his government. But Thorpe, conscious of the bitter divisions that negotiations would cause, rejected it out of hand.

Under a new leader, the Liberals will have to consider the perils and promise of coalition politics again. The two-party system shows no sign of cracking up, nor does proportional representation which would give the Liberals seats equivalent to their voting strength, appear much nearer. A party which has had no taste of power for half a century badly needs an infusion of realism.

The end of Thorpe's leadership has been an unhappy, sordid, miserable business. None of the participants can look back on the intrigues which accompanied it with any pride. But if it unites the Liberal party again, it may mark a new beginning.

The Henry James Gang

russell baker

With publication of Spiro Agnew's novel about the tribulations of a fictional vice president of the United States and John Ehrlichman's novel about a brilliant White House assistant to a president suffering from phlebitis, America entered its golden age of literary politicians.

These works were followed closely by George Meany's sensitive and moving "For Whom the Electoral Bell Tolls," the story of an aging president of the AFL-CIO who saves the nation from a disastrous reduction in military spending by blowing up a Democratic Convention, and by Abe Beame's beautiful "Farewell to Schoolmarms," the tale of a short New York mayor whose love for 1,700 school teachers is forever doomed when a budget deficit forces him to lose them all on a voyage across the East River.

Esthetically, neither the Meany nor the Beame novel matched the stylistic mastery of Agnew's, least of all in their handling of the obligatory sex passages. Agnew's virtuosity empowered him to deal with sex in metaphors of water, timepieces and banking transactions, as in the line: ". . .the current flowed faster and before the clock had moved twenty minutes, she was carried in crashing waves over the falls and deposited in the tranquil pool of slaked desire."

The absence of comparable passages in the Meany and Beame novels probably accounted for their lack of popular success and movie sales. Thus, when Henry Kissinger offered his publisher "Remembrance of Flings Past," his seven-volume novel about a brilliant persecuted secretary of state with a German accent, it was sent back with instructions for Kissinger to "put more sex into it."

The result was the famous sleeping-bag scene, set in the aisle of a giant government jet at 35,000 feet as it speeds over the Indian Ocean on a mission to prevent a dangerous shift in the balance of power. ("Did you feel the earth move?" she asked. "It was not the earth moving, little one. It was the balance of power shifting," he said. "Tell me again about the great Metternich," she begged.).

Kissinger's success was followed almost immediately by Ronald Reagan's blockbuster, "Maws," the story of a deceptively youthful looking former movie actor who is vacationing at a California resort town when it is suddenly menaced by fierce schools of giant welfare mothers who dart out of the surf and consume whole taxpayers in single bites.

Although the climax, in which Reagan's hero, Donald Deegan, pursues them by canoe until they are trapped in the Panama Canal, then saves the resort's tourist season by blowing up the locks, seemed implausible in print, it created such a thrilling conclusion to the film version that Reagan took in 20 million votes at the box office alone.

Thereafter, of course, there was no staying politicians from the typewriter. For months at a stretch, the Senate was unable to muster a quorum because so many senators were busy elsewhere working on their novels about senators who saved the nation from welfare mothers, cuts in the military budget, shifts in the balance of power and phlebitis.

Observing that politics opened the road to literary fame and riches, writers left their lonely rooms and began talking nonsense to large crowds in public places, which was not only much more fun, a lot less lonely and much easier than writing, but also got them elected to public offices ornamented by steady income.

Soon the great bulk of the government was made up of writers who had gone into politics in order to taste literary success. Saul Bellow was president of the United States and Norman Mailer secretary of state. Jimmy Breslin was vice president, Woody Allen was running the Post Office, William Buckley was mayor of Chicago and David Halberstam was speaker of the House of Representatives.

Since all these people were very busy putting their forthcoming best-sellers in shape for publication, they were very irritable most of the time and easily became infuriated by any criticism that did not come from their editors.

They were particularly sensitive to criticism that they were too busy writing novels to govern the country, a criticism which was beginning to be heard with insistent frequency from the great writers like Agnew, Ehrlichman, Meany, Beame, Kissinger and Reagan, all of whom relieved the boredom of their rich retirement by writing columns or delivering television commentary.

Finally the government decided to counterattack. At a secret White House conference, they assigned Vice President Breslin to make an oratorical assault on Agnew, Ehrlichman, Reagan and all. "What do you want me to call them?" asked Breslin.

"An effete corps of impudent snobs," someone suggested, but all the writers booed, and said they would resign rather than be identified with a line as graceless as that. "What about 'nattering nabobs of negativism'?" asked a secretary. Everybody said anybody who would write a line like that ought to be thrown out of the government.

They were still arguing when their publishers entered and threw them all out of the office on grounds of treating literature with respect.

$20M Convention Trade Splits Ottawa and Hull

OTTAWA (CP) — Nestled side-by-side on the Ottawa River, the cities of Hull and Ottawa sometimes find themselves in an uneasy relationship.

For years, the Quebec city was regarded as the night-time play spot after civil service-dominated Ottawa had closed down.

But recently, as Hull has buildings and payrolls that received a share of the massive federal investment in buildings and payrolls that have made Ottawa a modern, prosperous city, that relationship has been changing.

And with it have come some strains.

Only recently former prime minister John Diefenbaker was thundering in the Commons because he felt there was a move afoot to lump Ottawa and Hull into a capital district. There was only one capital — Ottawa — and anyone who wanted to change that would meet the fight of their lives, he claimed.

Convention promoters in the two cities now engage in a lively competition.

At stake are up to 300 conventions a year that bring in about $20 million — and both cities want their share.

Hull is planning a 70,000-square-foot convention centre in a revitalized downtown city core.

It is to be part of the second stage of the Place du Centre development and will be flanked by 1,000 hotel rooms. It is part of a federal plan to direct more growth to Hull than it has previously received.

In fact, by 1984 it is anticipated that 35,000 federal civil servants will be located in Hull, compared with only 3,000 in 1969.

"This is part of what senior officials of the Capital Visitors and Convention Bureau call a simplistic decision to shift the balance of business activity to Hull from Ottawa.

"But they've forgotten to bring the business community into focus," Glen Moore, executive vice-president of the tourist bureau, complains.

Hull and Ottawa are moving toward becoming competitors for convention business without adequate consultation between them, he says.

The Ottawa officials are particularly annoyed because they feel their concerns were not heeded by the National Capital Commission (NCC) and the federal works department, which are financing part of Hull's new project.

Partly to counter this, the tourist bureau supported local organizations such as merchants' groups and the board of trade are campaigning for a convention centre in Ottawa. Ottawa convention facilities are divided among about five major hotels.

The Civic Centre in the city's Lansdowne Park is not an adequate centre for sophisticated conventions, Moore says.

The tourist bureau has prepared a major brief to regional government officials for the Ottawa-Carleton area calling for a 50,000 to 100,000-square-foot centre with separate meeting rooms and a trade exhibit area in Ottawa.

Without it, bureau officials say, Hull will gain an unreasonable advantage over Ottawa in drawing power for conventions and the Ottawa downtown core will suffer because of it.

$2.25 A SHARE AT THE ROYAL

MONTREAL (CP) — Royal Bank of Canada reports revenue after taxes of $82,128,000 or $2.25 a share for the six months ending April 30, 1976.

This compared with $72,352,000 or $2.15 a share on a smaller number of shares outstanding, for the corresponding period last year.

Balance of revenue before taxes was $145.2 million, up 3.9 per cent from the first half of last year.

The banks total assets stood at $26.6 billion April 30, topping the $26 billion mark for the first time. Deposits totalled $24.3 billion, up 16.7 per cent, while total loans were at $16.7 billion, up 15.4 per cent.

Balance of revenue for the three months ending April 30 was $34,732,000 or 95 cents a share, down 4.4 per cent from $36,335,000 or $1.07 a shar on a smaller number of shares, from the second quarter last year.

Chairman and president W. Earle McLaughlin noted the balance of revenue for the second quarter was also significantly below the record high level reported in the first quarter of 1976.

"This decline was the result of narrower interest-rate spreads in Canada as the tighter monetary policy followed by the Bank of Canada required us to fund unseasonally high loan demand, with high cost deposits; as well, non-interest expenses continued to rise," he said in a statement.

McLaughlin said he believed the bank was complying with the general terms of regulations on bank prices and profits announced by the federal Anti-Inflation Board following the first quarter report.

"Also, we believe we are in compliance with the compensation and dividend restraints which have been detailed and are common to all affected corporations," he said.

GOP 'SCARED OF NELSON'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Vice-President Nelson Rockefeller will never be president "unless someone waves a magic wand," his wife said in a Knight newspaper interview Sunday.

She said her husband has suffered at the hands of the GOP because "elements of the party are scared to death of Nelson. I don't understand why," she said.

She said she was not bitter but it was "a tragedy for the country that mediocrity be allowed to control some things."

In 1963 Happy Murphy and Nelson Rockefeller divorced their spouses and married each other.

The resulting political flap "was a shocker to me. They were out to destroy Nelson. I hope we don't allow a small segment of kooks to do that again to this country."

Massive Soviet Return to Indonesia

By HAMISH McDONALD
Washington Post

JAKARTA — The Soviet Union has made a massive reentry over the last few months into aid to Indonesia, ending a freeze on Soviet projects that was begun with the 1965 coup attempt by Indonesian Communists.

The Indonesian mines minister, Dr. Mohammed Sadli, recently announced the Soviet Union had agreed in principle to give technical and financial assistance for a proposed $360 million aluminum smelter.

A feasible study is now being made for the smelter, to be located near bauxite deposits on Bintan Island near Singapore.

It would feed an aluminum refinery planned as part of the $800 million Asahan hydroelectric scheme being developed in north Sumatra with Japanese interests.

Late last year the Soviet Union agreed to help build a 600-megawatt hydroelectric power plant in west Java and a 180-megawatt plant in central Java.

The three projects will put Soviet technicians back in the field in Indonesia for the first time since the coup attempt, when Soviet aid projects, including a steel plant in west Java and an oceanographic insitute in Ambon, were abandoned half-completed.

Although relations between Moscow and Jakarta are still correct rather than friendly, both sides see distant advantages in widening contacts.

Indonesia is hungry for development capital, particularly since the financial disaster of its state oil company, Pertamina.

It can also use the links with the Soviet Union to counter accusations that it is becoming a U.S. satellite or America's "policeman" in Southeast Asia, following Communist victories in Indochina.

In what was probably an international leak, the first news of the Soviet-assisted hydroelectric schemes came out a few days before the visit to Jakarta by Presient Ford last December.

The economic benefit for Moscow is clearly slight since the volume of trade between the two countries currently stands at only about $30 million a year.

The Soviet Union's principal gain is in its competition with China for influence among the developing nations. China's diplomatic relations with Indonesia have been suspended since the coup.

A major thrust of Soviet diplomatic and propaganda activity here has been to encourage distrust of China's intentions toward southeast Asia.

But behind the exchanges of parliamentary delegations, the trade and technical agreements and the ministerial visits, Indonesian officials are still cynical about Soviet strategy.

It was noted here that an anonymous representative of the banned Indonesian Communist party attended the recent Soviet Communist party congress.

Ford Plans Summit

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — President Ford has invited several other heads of government to hold a summit meeting with him soon on international problems, Ford administration officials said Sunday.

The officials said current plans are to hold the summit somewhere in the Caribbean before mid-August when the Republican party chooses its candidate for the November United States presidential election.

The summit is likely soon after the last primary elections June 8, the officials said.

The first hint of the meeting came in the current issue of Newsweek magazine which quotes White House aides as denying the talks will be held to enhance Ford's political fortunes.

The president is locked in a tight race with former California governor Ronald Reagan for the Republican nomination. Most political analysts believe neither man will win it on the first ballot at the party's convention in Kansas City.

Asked about the projected summit, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said:: "We have nothing to announce."

Other officials said plans are being made for the summit. It was not immediately known which world leaders have been approached by Ford.

Urged to Organize

Development plans are popping up so often in Colwood it's time residents there organized to protect themselves, Jack Hannam said today.

So all people living there are invited to the organizational meeting tonight of a Colwood Ratepayers' Association.

The meeting will be at 7:30 p.m. in the gymnasium of Sangster Elementary School.

Hannam, a school teacher who ran for the regional board last year, said it's important residents get together to lend Colwood's regional director, Howard Drummond, a hand.

Search Delays Race Results

Swiftsure race officials, stunned by the tragic accident involving one of the competitors, won't know until later today or Tuesday the names of the winning boats.

An official said this morning the problem of calculating corrected times was being further compounded by giving time allowances for those boats that took part in the search operations for Wilbur Willard.

A record number of boats competed in this year's Swiftsure — 222, up 22 over last year. There were 105 entries in the shorter Juan de Fuca race, down 26 from last year. Both races are run simultaneously.

The first Swiftsure boat home was th Wilmington, Delaware-based Kialoa, owned by Jim Kilroy. She wins the City of Victoria trophy.

The 79-foot aluminium ketch, reputed to have been built at a cost of $1 million, tagged in at 12:19 p.m. Sunday, covering the 136.2-mile distance in just over 27 hours, considered by race official Tony Burton a "fairly fast time."

The Kialoa was also first boat to round the Swiftsure Mark, at 9:31 p.m. Saturday. For that feat she earns the Royal Canadian Navy Trophy.

On the homeward leg, however, she fought a nip-and-tuck battle with two other American boats — Joli, a 61-foot sloop skippered by William Niemi of Seattle and Ragtime, a 62-foot sloop owned by Dr. W. White and W. Pasquini out of Long Beach, Calif.

Ragtime was second, arriving at 12:23 p.m. and Joli, crossing four minutes later, third.

Fourth was Weatherly, a 67-foot sloop owned by Lynn Sommers and Alan Buchan clocking in at 12:45 p.m.

But a Victoria boat could sweep away with the coveted Swiftsure trophy, awarded to the overall winner on the basis of corrected time.

Unofficially, Distant Drummer, owned by Greg Oliver of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club is placed in the top three boats.

The 34-foot sloop was the 17th boat to finish crosing the line at 4:30 p.m. and winning division three of the IOR boats (International Off-Shore Rule).

In 1974 Distant Drummer won its division and placed fifth overall.

Another Royal Victoria Yacht Club boat, the 29-foot Sea Spell, owned by Jan Huibers, was first to cross the finish line in the 75.6 mile Juan de Fuca race. She crossed at 6 a.m. Sunday.

Following her were two boats from the Royal Vancouver Yacht Club, Lara, a 32-foot sloop owend by Ken Clark arriving at 6.08 a.m., and Double Entry, a 33-foot C and C owned by E. A. Liebert, at 6:14 a.m.

Burton said a computer is being used to calculate the corrected times for all finishers.

The race got off to a spinnaker-flying start when the gun sounded off Brotchie Ledge Beacon at 9 a.m. Saturday.

But the wind patterns soon changed, unexpectedly, and late starters had to close-haul their sails as they beat out west down the strait that separates Vancouver Island from the Olympic peninsula.

Burton described the winds as "flukey."

He said a low weather system hit the Washington coast and left a trough in the strait making winds erratic.

Beyond Cape Flattery, in open ocean, gale force winds from the west whipped up the sea. Twenty to 25-foot waves were reported.

One boater said there was so much foam, the phosphorescence it produced gave clear visibility in an otherwise funereally black night.

Like last year the wind died on Sunday and a strong ebb tide played havoc with all but the leaders who were well down the strait by then.

Burton said four boats withdrew because of mechanical problems. They included the 1973 Swiftsure winner, Greybeard, a 73-foot ketch owned by Lol Killam of Vancouver.

Greybeard broke its mast Saturday as did Tinkerbelle, a 24-foot sloop owned by Dr. L. Riggs of Port Angeles.

Szores, a 33-foot sloop, skippered by Tim Erickson of Seattle withdrew because of rigging failure and Skookum, a 30-foot sloop owned by Gerald Parker of Tacoma, because of rudder loss.

WCB PROTESTER HUNGER STRIKES

A 51-year-old Mission man started a hunger strike in front of the legislative buildings at midnight Sunday, protesting his treatment by the Workers Compensation Board.

Kent Gilham, well bundled against the cold rain, stood outside today with a sign reading: "I will not eat until the WCB gives injured workers the same rights given to pimps, rape artists and drug pedlars by the courts of Canada — the right to see evidence against them."

He vowed he will continue his hunger strike until all claimants who come before the WCB are given the right to examine the evidence that has been complied on their claims.

Last week Gilham set up a picket line with his family in front of the WCB administrative offices in Vancouver, saying he would stay there until the board gave him compensation for a back injury he received Oct. 2 while working as a trucker.

While he was on the picket line, two letters were hand delivered to him. One told him his compensation for the Oct. 2 injury had been calculated at $696.60; the other told him he had been overpaid for a previous injury in the amount of $7,186.63 and therefore he owed the board $6,489.73.

Gilham was discharged last week from Lions Gate Hospital in North Vancouver after having had two spinal discs removed.

Gilham's claim for the back injury was at first disallowed, then allowed, then cancelled.

The final cancellation was apparently because he had gone back to truck driving while still claiming a WCB pension. He says he went back to driving for infrequent periods to see if he could build up his strength enough to work full time.

He says he met with his MLA George Mussallem last week and Mussallem told Gilham he would get in touch with Attorney-General Garde Gardom and Labor Minister Allan Williams about the case.

SOOKE WOMAN KILLED

A Sooke woman died in Victoria General Hospital at the weekend from internal injuries suffered in a car-truck collision on Sooke Road.

Sooke RCMP said Karina Clare Flock, 38, of 5199 Sooke Rd. was westbound late Friday on the highway near Cooper's Cove when her vehicle collided with a pickup truck driven by Kenneth Douglas Filgate, 19, also of Sooke.

A police spokesman said the Flock vehicle was struck along the driver's side. Both vehicles ended up in the west bound lane, he said.

Mrs. Flock was alone in her car. There were three other occupants in the truck. None was seriously injured.

The accident is still being investigated by Sooke RCMP.

Wet, Dull, Cold

Wet, dull, cold.

That was May, one more month in the continuing trend toward an "unseasonable" spring in Victoria.

Up to this morning, with still the better part of a day left in the month, the Victoria weather office reported 9.1 mm more rain than normal, about 70 hours less sunshine than could be expected, and a new low mean temperature record for the 29th — a mere 6.7 degrees above freezing.

Chief weather officer Norman Dressler also said Sunday registered the lowest high temperature for May 30 since 1955, just 12 degrees or one degree colder than that date 21 years ago.

Friday, Saturday and Sunday were uniformly cool. The 28th had a low of 6.9 compared with the previous 8.9; the 29th 6.7 (8.9 in 1951); the 30th 8.8 (9.4 in 1955).

There were 39.6 mm of rain (30.5 more than normal), bringing total precipitation this year to 489.6 mm, and 205.6 hours of sunshine where something like 275 sunny hours should be recorded.

Gunmen Bind Clerk, Wheel Off $13,000

By PAUL NICHOLSON

Two masked and armed robbers made off with nearly $13,000 from the Sherwood Park Inn on Gorge Road early Sunday after tying up the night auditor and wheeling away the hotel safe.

It was the second of two armed robberies in the area over the weekend. Two men appeared in provincial court today charged with armed robbery in connection with a $267 hold-up at the Pay-N-Save gas station on the Pat Bay Highway Saturday night.

Valerie Ann Baier, 25, of 505-531 West Bay Terrace is still in hospital with injuries suffered after the getaway car crashed.

In the Sherwood Park hold-up, night auditor Douglas Lane of 5187 Cordova Bay Rd. was working in a small cubicle at the front desk when suddenly two men appeared wearing light-colored stocking masks over their faces.

One of the men, brandishing a revolver in his left hand, approached Lane and said: "Hey buddy!" He then grabbed the auditor and led him out of the cubicle.

"On your belly," he told Lane, and when the 18-year-old clerk complied, the men taped his hands behinds his back and wound tape around his head over his mouth.

The duo then carried Lane into the manager's office and placed him on the floor where they taped his feet.

After he heard the men leave, Lane tried unsuccessfully to dial the operator. Then, he knocked the direct phone line to Victoria Taxi off the hook.

Taxi driver John Adlington, 27, arrived. Lane was untied and police were called.

The two robbers were described as being in their mid-20s. One is about five-feet nine inches tall weighing about 140 pounds. The other is about five-feet 10 or 11 inches tall and 130 pounds.

The thieves had rifled a cash box containing about $900, and had removed the 18-inch by 18-inch safe on a wheeled dolly they had brought with them.

The safe contained about $10,000 cash and $2,000 in cheques and Chargex slips.

Victoria City Police Staff Sgt. Gordon Bennett said it was obvious the two men were prepared to take the safe. "This was not just a holdup from the till," he said.

Charged with armed robbery in the Pay-N-Save hold-up are Jack Raymond Chamberlain, 29, of 28-1224 Balmoral Rd. and Gerald Paul Ritchie, 30, of no fixed address.

Ritchie was remanded to later today and Chamberlain to Tuesday when their lawyers will be present.

Central Saanich police said three persons drove up to the gas station, filled the car's tank with gas, and then pulled a knife on employee Rick Curry, 16, of 2335 Tanner.

He gave them the money in his change pouch and the three fled in their car north on the highway.

About five miles up the road, the car crashed. Two men then tried to escape, but were arrested a short time later hiding in Marigold Nursery, 7874 Lochside.

From Man to Boy, a Gift Beyond Price

SOMEWHERE ALONG a stream a young fisherman may have the lure to meet his Izaak Walton. Mine was a fishing dentist from Courtenay who took time out from his angling one evening to instruct me.

Searun cutthroat trout had ventured in from the saltchuck on the tide to a long, gently-flowing river reach. Upstream or down, wherever I looked, those trout were rising.

At first in hope, then in deepening frustration, I lobbed my worm-baited spinner at the dimples and spreading circles that patterned the reach. But the searuns that sometimes fed with reckless abandon weren't interested in what I had to offer. They ignored my worm and spinner even when some desperation throw plunked it into one of their charmed circles.

That's when the Courtenay dentist emerged upon the scene. A big old willow creel sagged on his haunch, a fly rod wagged in his hand. He set the creel on the pebble bar, waded into the reach until his hip boots were all but shipping water, and unlimbered his rod. While I ate my heart out, he hooked, played and landed a fine trout. Then he proceeded to catch another.

During this virtuoso performance, I drifted step-by-step closer. The expert paid me no more attention than the trout he engaged with such casual-seeming grace had bestowed on my bait rig. He was the first authentic fly fisherman I'd ever seen: I watched in awe and envy while he wafted out his line and connected with yet another trout.

He proved he was human and fallible by losing that fish, and his fly with it. Then he turned from the sunset-tinted reach, and became aware of his gallery — one bug-eyed 12-year-old in wet overalls and running shoes, with a telescoping steel bait rod in his hand.

"Any luck?" he asked me.

I shook my head.

"Sometimes they're fussy," he said. He took a leather case from his jacket pocket, and opened it to reveal trout flies, row on row of them, snicked into felt leaves. Unhurriedly he chose a fly. It had a red belly-band with a green bump at either end, white wings, and brown whiskers.

"Royal Coachman," he said. "We'll try them with that."

He knotted the fly to his leader. Then he set the rod in my hands.

"Get in there," he told me. "See what you can do."

His outfit felt light, balanced and dainty after my awkward steel rod. I was in terror of damaging it. But the trout were still making their magic circles.

I waded in and thrashed about, trying to cast as I'd seen the master do. For a while everything went wrong. The line flopped on the water behind me or tumbled in slack confusion in front of me.

Finally I achieved a short and sloppy cast that dropped the fly a yard or two beyond the shallows. A trout grabbed it.

As searuns go, it was a small trout, but it was larger than any I'd hooked before. Miraculously, it stayed with me — that evening was generous with miracles. I beached it on the freshet bar, untangled line and leader from the tag alders, and restored the fly rod to its owner.

He hadn't coached or criticized. He had just looked on calmly from his seat on the log while a green kid worked out his own conversion to one of the minor arts.

Nor did he burden me with fly-fishermen's profundities when my trout was safely landed.

"You never know," he said. "They're taking flies tonight. Tomorrow they might go for a worm a lot better."

I met Doc Moore, the dentist from Courtenay, on other stream rovings. He differed from Izaak Walton (who was never a convinced fly fisherman) in that he instructed much more by example than by spoken pronouncement. But the generous spirit was the same: like Father Walton, he borrowed time from his limited leisure to add a new dimension to an apprentice angler's world.

He is long gone from the earthly water-brooks, but I remember him with gratitude.

For he taught without seeming to teach, and there's no finer gift that a man can make to a boy.

Saltspring's Fare Beef Continues

Saltspring Island residents are meeting today to decide how to continue their protest against ferry fare increases.

The island's Chamber of Commerce Saturday sent a telegram to Premier Bennett saying the increases were punitive and "a slap in the face" to the islanders.

The new commuter fare regulations announced last week benefit only one per cent of island residents, the telegram says, and it asks that Bennett personally look into a revision of the fares.

The islanders ask that the books of commuter tickets be transferable within the buyers' immediate family and that the tickets be valid for at least one year, instead of the current one month.

Bookworms Love Oldies

When there are bargains to be had, the bookworm turns in Greater Victoria.

On Saturday an estimated 2,000 of them turned to the First United Church hall at Balmoral and Quadra, for the first-ever book sale organized by the Greater Victoria Public Library.

Librarian Donald Miller said today the sale realized more than $5,600 and disposed of about 15,000 books and 400 reproductions.

He described the six-hour sale as "a great success," and said it was impossible to categorize the buyers either by age or income bracket.

Johnny Wins Shortest Indy

JOHNNY RUTHERFORD
. . . happy winner

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) "If you hang around long enough, things eventually come back your way," said Johnny Rutherford.

But A. J. Foyt must be starting to wonder.

Rutherford, washed out of a shot at a second successive Indianapolis 500 triumph last year, was swept into victory Sunday by the same kind of midwestern thunderstorm that had left him in second place in 1975.

And Foyt, a veteran of 19 of these Memorial Day races, came up short once again in his bid for an unprecedented fourth Indy championship.

Last year, Rutherford made an untimely pit stop that dropped him behind winner Bobby Unser. It happened only minutes before rain swept the sprawling Indianapolis Motor Speedway and turned the Indy 500 into the Indy 435.

This time, it was Foyt who chose to pull into the pits at the wrong time. After going nose-to-nose with Rutherford through the 78th lap he pulled in for a tire change during the 79th. By the time he came out, he was a full 36 seconds behind Rutherford.

Standing on the pedal all the way, he shaved that margin to only a few seconds. Then the rains came.

When they did, the Indy 500 was marked down to a bargain-basement figure. It was the Indy 255, a 102-lap race that made it the shortest in the race's 60-year history.

PIT STOP HURTS FOYT

Rutherford acknowledged that he was determined not to make the same mistake he had made a year ago.

"I saw the rain was coming and decided to hang on as long as I could so I'd be ahead if the race had to be stopped," he said. "I was very conscious of the fact that we were just about passing the halfway point and it was about to become an official race.

"I remembered what I did last year and I guess I sort of said to myself, 'Not this time.'".

So Rutherford, who disdained a fifth pit stop while Foyt took his, held on to win by a slim 15 seconds over A.J. with an average speed of 148.725 miles an hour.

Foyt was clocked at barely one-half a mile an hour slower—and when the official winnings are announced tonight, it will probably leave him about $100,000 poorer than he might have been if he'd kept up that wheel-to-wheel duel with Rutherford.

Foyt said there was more than just bad timing contributing to his defeat. He accused Rutherford of improperly widening his lead during the yellow caution flag that preceded the rain delay.

"Rutherford and I are friends," Foyt said, "but right is right and wrong is wrong."

Rutherford, though, wasn't exactly buying Foyt's claim.

"You do everything you can to win," he said. "I didn't cheat and A.J. knows it and the timers and scorers agree with me."

Rutherford, who figures to pick up more than $200,000 from the $1-million purse, said—not all that convincingly—that his rain-aided finish was "a hollow victory."

"I think I'm pretty fortunate that the race was stopped. I think if it had gone on, I could very well have lost it."

He could have, indeed. When the race was halted, Foyt was able to repair a broken sway bar. And with the track virtually dried out after a wait of more than two hours, Foyt was ready to chase him.

Only six of the 33 starters weren't around at the end. And in a race which has been lambasted for its history of tragic crashes, this one was virtually accident-free.

The only blemish came very early when Roger McCluskey nicked a wall, skidded to the infield and stepped unhurt from his battered machine.

The only other dropouts were rookie Spike Gehlhausen, Billy Vukovich, David Hobbs, Dick Simon and Gary Bettenhausen, all with mechanical problems.

Following Johncock among the top finishers were Wally Dallenbach, Pancho Carter, Tom Sneva, Al Unser, Mario Andretti, Salt Walther and Al's brother, Bobby.

MALE DRIVERS TASTE CROW

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — David Pearson, winner of the $249,155 World 600 stock car race, ate some crow Sunday after Janet Guthrie finished 15th in the gruelling 600-mile race.

"I think she suprised everybody," said the smiling Mercury driver who had just beaten Richard Petty's Dodge as the 17th annual race ended under caution.

Pearson said Tuesday he didn't think she would make the 40-car field.

Miss Guthrie, who started 27th, finished 21 laps behind Pearson and completed 379 of the 400-lap event to win $3,555 at the 1.5-mile Charlotte Motor Speedway.

"I felt like she wouldn't last 600 miles," Pearson said of the 38-year-old New York physicist, who failed to qualify for the Indianapolis 500 a week ago because of engine problems. "She surprised me the way she was driving all week."

Early leader Cale Yarborough finished third in a Chevrolet, one lap behind Pearson and Petty. Bobby Allison's Mercury was fourth and the Chevrolet of Benny Parsons was fifth, two laps down.

"I knew I could go all the way somewhere after 2½ to three hours," said Miss Guthrie, praising Ralph Moody, who prepared her Chevrolet, Yarborough, Donnie Allison and other drivers who helped her during the week.

The race, slowed to an average speed of 137.352 miles an hour by seven caution flags, lasted four hours, 22 minutes and six seconds.

Pearson, who has won five races in nine starts this season, pocketed the second highest payoff in NASCAR history— $49,990, including $12,000 in lap money and $11,000 for winning the pole position. Petty won $22,465 and Yarborough took home $19,220.

CLOSE PLAY at second base is in the making as Victoria's Harvey Stevenson (5) starts slide while New Westminster's Muzz Merrick gets ball during Pacific Coast Men's Fastball League game Sunday. Stevenson made it, and so did Victoria as Bates stretched league winning streak to 18 straight.

Suns Muscle Celtics

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Boston Celtics coach Tom Heinsohn says Phoenix Suns, his team's opponent in the National Basketball Association finals, "are getting away with murder."

Alvan Adams, a 21-year-old rookie, scored 33 points Sunday, grabbing 14 rebounds and guiding the young Phoenix team to a 105-88 victory over the Celtics in the third game of the best-of-seven series.

Heinsohn, a former Celtics star and the team's coach for the last six years, was seething after the game which narrowed the Celtics lead to 2-1. His anger was directed at both the Suns and officials Richie Powers and Paul Mihalak.

He charged the Suns with being "actors and not very good ones".

"I got tired of seeing Westy (Paul Westphal) and Van (Dick Van Arsdale) falling down all the time," the angry Heinsohn said. 'Every time we pressed them, they belted us with their elbows, then fell over.

"One time, Westy just bulled over Jimmy Ard and it was a foul on Ard."

Heinsohn pointed out that the Celtics took an early lead, then started pressing the Suns in the backcourt. It was Boston's pressing defence that had rattled the Suns in the first two games and had limited their field-goal shooting percentage to .384.

But this time, Heinsohn said, the officials didn't let them execute it the way they wanted to.

"As soon as we started pressing them." Heinsohn said, 'the officials, or at least one of them (Mihalak) told us to get our hands off. Then the whistles started blowing (for fouls) and that was the end of our press."

There was not much difference in the number of fouls called on either team. Boston was charged with 34 personal fouls and Phoenix 31.

But the Celtics lost starters Dave Cowens and Charlie Scott with six fouls apiece, while no one fouled for Phoenix.

The loss of Cowens was the big blow for the Celtics. When he went out with 5:18 remaining, the Celtics had chopped a 23 point third quarter deficit to 92-83. Thirty-three seconds later it was 92-88.

But with Cowens out, Adams went to work on Ard, Boston's reserve centre.

He scored eight of Phoenix's next 10 points, giving him 12 for the fourth quarter, and handed off for the other two points to Westphal, who finished with 22.

Jo Jo White was Boston's leading scorer with 22 points.

Ricky Sobers of Phoenix and Kevin Stacom of Boston were ejected from the game in the second quarter for fighting.

Hitting Power Up Front Keeps Victoria's Rivals Far Behind

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Victoria Bates' front order seems to be another of several reasons the defending Canadian senior men's softball champions are making a mockery of the Pacific Coast League "race."

A race it is not. Bates are seven games in front of second-place Vancouver Magicians after running their winning streak to 18 straight with a four-game sweep at the weekend.

Bates belted Abbotsford Merchants 12-0 and 3-2 Saturday night at Royal Athletic Park and then stopped still-winless New Westminster Royal Towers Blues 9-1 and 3-0 Sunday.

Victoria's Stan Kern, Dave Ruthowsky and Andy Konopacki continue to provide pitching excellence but an impressive offence is making things much easier for the unbeatable trio.

The front end has provided significant assistance.

Bates have scored 103 runs in their 18 league games for an average of 5.7 in a sport supposedly dominated by pitching. The players who regularly bat in the first six positions in the lineup have scored 73 runs.

They are Carl Walker (six runs), Pete Songhurst (12), Ken Bate (15), Harvey Stevenson (14), playing-coach Bob Burrows (16) and Bob Holness (10).

Stevenson, the veteran outfielder who is off to an equally-impressive individual start, sees the sustained Victoria offense as the major reason the league's other teams have been continually embarrassed by the co-holders of the world championship.

"The other teams aren't any worse than they were last year," he declared. "We just happen to be scoring a lot more runs.

"The first six are scoring regularly and our team, as a whole, is forcing the other teams to make plays. We're not striking out. We're getting the ball in play and we've been able to take advantage of men on bases."

Stevenson's runs-batted-in total emphasizes Victoria's increased productivity. He had 22 rbi's during the 40-game schedule last year.

After Sunday's 18th game, Harvey's rbi total this season stood at 20.

Stevenson's fourth homer of the season, coming in the second inning of Sunday's opener, accounted for three more rbi's.

Ten of Victoria's 11 non-pitching players managed at least one hit during the weekend. Walker led the weekend assault with six hits. Songhurst had five while Stevenson and Bate each had four. Holness and Mike Taaffe each added three.

Ruthowsky won two of the pitching decisions, both by shutouts. He allowed only three hits in Saturday's 12-0 victory and fashioned a two-hitter against the Blues on Sunday to run his record to 7-0.

Kern won his seventh and Konopacki took his fourth with a four-hitter and a 16-strikeout performance Saturday.

Bates added one non-playing addition at the weekend. Ernie Savoie joined Bates as a coaching assistant.

Delesalle, Weinberg Bibby Capture Titles

Victoria competitors took a lion's share of the silverware by grabbing three of the five all-round class titles at the conclusion of the two-day B.C. gymnastics championships Sunday at the University of Victoria.

Philip Delesalle of Victoria Sports School retained the senior men's crown and captured the Willy Weiber Trophy as the top male gymnast with a total of 107.35 points from the optionals Saturday and the compulsory events Sunday.

Delesalle, who will be competing in the Montreal Olympics, won over Bill Mackie of Vancouver (101.15) and clubmate Owen Walstrom (99.85) for the crown.

Dave Bibby of UVic collected the junior men's crown with 90.32 and clubmate Brian Beggart was runner-up with 74.96. Western Canada champion Danny Leblanc, who was second after the optionals, and Mike Burnside, both of Courtenay, had to withdraw from the competition because of injuries.

Jill Weinberg of Victoria Flying "Y" snapped a tie for first place following the optionals with strong performances in the compulsory vault (9.00) and uneven bars (9.10) to win the junior women's title with total of 69.70. Maureen Chow of Vancouver, who was tied with Miss Weinberg, finished a close second at 69.30 and Tami Knight of Vancouver placed third at 67.15.

Patti Sakaki of Vancouver won the novice girls' title with 67.85 while Julie Alexander of Flying "Y" was runner-up at 65.30. Linda Botner of Vancouver was third (63.60) and Janice Acktem of Flying "Y" eighth (60.00).

Lisa Broderick of Vancouver won the senior women's title with 69.75 after completing the competition without any opposition. Rayanne Petersen and Kym Gordon, both independent Victoria gymnasts, withdrew because of injuries suffered during warmups Saturday. Miss Petersen hurt her achilles tendon and Miss Gordon suffered an ankle injury.

Miss Broderick also won the Sandra Hartley Trophy as the top female gymnast in the meet.

About 800 spectators attended each of the two days of the competition.

The results of the provincial meet were combined with a trial in April to produce a B.C. team for the Canadian championships, scheduled for July 1-3 at the UVic McKinnon Building.

The B.C. team:

SENIOR MEN: Philip Delesalle and Owen Walstrom of Victoria; Bill Mackie of Vancouver.

JUNIOR MEN: Dave Bibby, Brian Begoart, Mike Vosson and Chuck Hanlon of Victoria; Mike Burnside and Danny Leblanc of Courtenay.

SENIOR WOMEN: Kym Gordon and Rayanne Petersen of Victoria; Lisa Broderick of Vancouver.

JUNIOR WOMEN: Jill Weinberg of Victoria; Karen Kelsall, Tami Stevens, Tami Knight, Angela Vossen and Maureen Chow of Vancouver.

Beer Boat Best

WASHINGTON (AP) — Olympia Beer, driven by Billy Schumacher of Seattle, won the 45th President's Cup regatta Sunday during a weekend marred by rain and problems for several of the unlimited hydroplanes.

Olympia Beer, averaging 108.744 miles an hour in the final heat of the day, defeated Atlas Van Lines and Miss Madison to take first place and win the $30,000 race over the 2½-mile Potomac River course in the nation's capital.

Olympia Beer took the lead at the start over Atlas Van Lines driven by Bill Muncey of La Mesa, Calif., and was never headed as it set a new course record on the first lap by traveling 116.279 miles an hour, some six miles an hour faster than the Pay 'N Pak in 1974.

Olympia ran subsequent laps of 111.111, 109.489, 107.914 and 107.143.

Rain wiped out the scheduled heats on Saturday and threatened to postpone the race Sunday.

Brill Tops Trials; Loverock Wins Two

QUEBEC (CP)—Debbie Brill learned a lesson last year that cost her dearly at the time but it could be of long-range benefit as she takes measure of the women's world high jumping standard.

The 23-year-old Haney, B.C., native, who turned her back on the sport three years ago, ensured her berth on the Canadian Olympic track and field team Sunday by winning the event with a leap of 1.89 metres.

It was just shy of her Canadian standard of 1.90 set earlier this month at a track meet in California where she's been training since January.

"I got a bladder infection last year when we went to Europe (where she first reached 1.89 in late June)," Debbie recalled Sunday.

"I started getting very tired and I wasn't in contact with my body. I just passed it off as fatigue—usually I'm very high — and ignored it for about two months."

Her ignorance of the ailment was costly. Debbie claims she never was right for the rest of the year and, while she will not admit it, proably cost her a medal at the Pan-American Games in October.

She felt the same symptoms coming on just before her Canadian record-setting performance in California.

"I've been taking medication for about two weeks now. It upset my training schedule a bit, but not that much where it's going to affect my performances."

Best individual performance of the two-day trials here was turned in by Vancouver sprinter Patty Loverock who won the women's 100 metres Saturday (10.2 seconds) and the 200 Sunday in the Canadian record time of 22.6 seconds.

She lopped almost a full second off her previous best performance in the 200 and both she and Joanne McTaggart of Saskatoon (22.8) surpassed the old standard of 23.1 held by Marjorie Bailey of Vancouver.

Both Loverock and Bailey equalled the 100-metre record of 11.1, set last week by Bailey in California, while winning their semi-final heats Saturday.

Other double winners on the weekend were pentathlon star Diane Jones of Saskatoon who won her specialty (4,507 points) and the long jump (6.31 metres) and Ottawa sprinter Hugh Fraser, winner of the men's 100 Saturday and the 200 Sunday.

Loverock, Jones and Fraser joined Brill on the Canadian Olympic track team.

Also making the team, by both winning here and either making the Olympic standard at this event or in a previous meet, were.

Brian Saunders, Toronto, 400 metres; Chris McCubbins, Winnipeg, 10,000 metres; Richard Rock, Toronto, long jump; Ken Wenman, Surrey, B.C., pole vault; Boris Chambul, Toronto, discuss; Grant McLaren, London, 5,000 metres; Daniel Taillon Montreal, 110-metre hurdles; Robert Forget, Montreal, high jump Bishop Dolgiewicz, Montreal, shot put; Margaret Stride, Waterford, Ont., 400 metres, Lucette Moreau, Montreal, discuss; Joan Wenzel, Waterloo, Ont., 800 metres.

Four Victoria athletes participated here but may have to compete in another trial meet in Montreal June 12-13 in order to qualify for the Olympic team.

Murray Keating won the hammer throw Saturday with a toss of 67.20 metres—almost five metres better than runnerup Scott Neilson of New Westminster but still fell 2.8 metres short of the qualifying figure of 69 metres.

Sprinter Joyce Yakubowich, Tom Griffin and Dave Weicker all turned in second-place performances.

Yakubowich, a double gold-medal winner in the last Pan-American Games, finished eight-tenths of a second behind Ontario's Marg Stride in the 400 metres.

Joyce, bothered by a minor ankle injury during pre-meet training, had a time of 54.7 seconds.

Neither Griffin nor first-place finisher Richard Moss of Ontario hit the Olympic qualification figure in the men's 800. Moss made it in 1:49.7, 1.7 seconds off the required figure, while Griffin's time was 1:51.2

Joe Sax of Ontario beat Weicker in the 3,000 steeplechase. Sax's time was 9:01.2 compared to Weicker's 9:15.1.

Victoria's Gordon Stewart did not compete in the decathlon, which was won by Zenon Smiechowski of B.C. There was no report on Phil Olsen of Nanaimo who previously had bettered the Olympic standard for the javelin.

Three New Faces In Boxla Offices

Officials of the Western Canada Junior Lacrosse League created two new executive positions "to relieve the commissioner of some of his responsibilities" said Bob Reid, general manager of Victoria McDonalds, following a meeting in Vancouver at the weekend.

Ron Phillips, general manager of Richmond Roadrunners, was named chairman to "co-ordinate between the commissioner and the league directors" and Jim Barr of Burnaby was appointed treasurer, which was previously the commissioner's responsibility.

Harry Wooley of Delta, who was "Mr. Lacrosse" in B.C. during 1974, was appointed interim commissioner for the remainder of this year after Fred Zinn tendered his resignation to take up a new job in Kelowna.

Reid said the new positions would enable the commissioner to devote more time to league promotion.

Meanwhile, Roadrunners dropped two games at the weekend.

The Richmond club lost 22-11 to host Burnaby Cablevision on Sunday after being beaten 16-11 by visiting Coquitlam J-Hawks on Saturday.

Ferguson Cracks Cedar Hill Record

Tom Moryson and Cec Ferguson have known each other since they were 13-years-old.

But that's not the reason they shared Sunday's glory in the annual Labatt's Cedar Hill Open golf tournament.

Consistency did it for Moryson. The 26-year-old professional from Pitt Meadows won the big prize with a pair of one-under-par 63 rounds and a 36-hole total of 126 that was worth $750.

Warmer weather was appreciated by Ferguson. The Vancouver Island Open champion from Gorge Vale and also 26, Ferguson, rebounded from an embarassing 10-over-par 74 Saturday to blister the Saanich municipal course with a record round Sunday.

An amateur, Ferguson cut loose with a birdie binge to score 29-28—57 and establish a new mark at Cedar Hill. The former record was 58, shared by professionals John Morgan and Vaughan Trapp.

It was the second course record established by Ferguson this year. He carved out a six-under 66 at Glen Meadows on his way to winning the City Intermediate championship earlier this year.

Ferguson also holds the unofficial course record at his home club — a seven-under-par 64.

"I just wanted to show that I can play in good weather," quipped Ferguson after Sunday's round. The 74 he scored Saturday (17 more strokes than he took Sunday) was achieved in miserable conditions.

"Actually, I'm not unhappy with the way I played Saturday. I thought I hit the ball very well," said Ferguson, "but just wound up taking too many strikes."

Ferguson's card Sunday included a bogey five when he three-putted the third hole, nine pars and eight birdies.

Moryson, who campaigned on the Canadian tour until he took the pro's job at Pitt Meadows, finished three strokes ahead of Kelowna's Dave Barr and Morgan.

Cedar Hill's Greg Barnes, who scored 66-64—130 to finish a stroke ahead of Ferguson, was the low amateur while clubmate Bill Bond won the handicap championship and the John Merriman Memorial Trophy.

A 20-handicapper, Bond put together a pair of 73s to wind up with a net 106, eight strokes better than runnerup Lloyd Stevens, also of Cedar Hill.

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Expos have purchased the contract of pitcher Steve Dunning, 23, from Denver Bears, an American Association baseball club.

May Blanks Tigers In Overtime Role

By The Associated Press

Rudy May had to work overtime Sunday because Dave Pagan had a stomach ache.

May responded to the challenge by allowing only four hits as he pitched New York Yankees to a 4-0 win over Detroit Tigers in an American League baseball game.

Pagan, a native of Nipawin, Sask., had to pass up his first start of the season when he came down with a virus, forcing May to start with only two days rest.

"My arm was tired," said May. "I threw over 100 pitches two days ago.

"But what are you going to do? The club is in first place. You just go and do your best."

In Sunday's other American League games, Milwaukee Brewers edged Cleveland Indians 5-4, Kansas City Royals nipped California Angels 3-2 in 14 innings, Minnesota Twins shaded Texas Rangers 4-3, Boston Red Sox downed Baltimore Orioles 3-1, and Chicago White Sox nipped Oakland A's 4-3 in 12 innings.

Detroit's Bill Laxton matched May's scoreless pitching until the Yankees scored all their runs in the sixth on a walk to Fred Stanley, Mickey Rivers' bunt single and consecutive home runs by Roy White and Thurman Munson.

"The reason why I was starting Pagan in the first place was to give the other starters an extra day's rest," said New York manager Billy Martin, who didn't learn of Pagan's illness until he got to the park.

"Maybe that's the secret. I won't tell 'em until the last minute."

In the National League Jerry Da Vanos of Houston batted in five runs with two singles and a bases-loaded triple to help the Astros to a 16-5 victory over Atlanta Braves and a sweep of the doubleheader. Houston won the opener 5-2. The Astros had 25 hits in the nightcap for a club record.

In other games Sunday, Philadelphia Phillies whipped Montreal Expos 7-1, Pittsburgh Pirates downed Chicago Cubs 4-2, Los Angeles Dodgers defeated Cincinnati Reds 6-5 in the first game of a doubleheader but lost the second 7-2, St. Louis Cardinals edged New York Mets 6-5 in 11 innings and San Diego Padres edged San Francisco Giants 4-3.

Jim Lonborg improved his record to 8-0 as the Phillies won their third in a row and 28th in 35 starts to maintain their 6½ game lead over Pittsburgh in the National League East.

Ron Cey had five hits, including three doubles, and scored from first base on Joe Ferguson's ninth-inning single to lift Los Angeles over Cincinnati in the first game of their twin bill. Tony Perez, Cesar Geronimo and Bill Plummer hit home runs for the Reds in the second game.

WEATHER STOPS CARS

Rain and cold forced postponement of the first race of the Carling-O'Keefe championship series for open superstocks — the Carling Opener — which was scheduled for Saturday at Western Speedway.

The race has been rescheduled for June 20. The second race of the series will be held June 26 and the final event is the Canada 200 on Sept. 11.

Vampires Breeze To Second Place

Don Riel and Kevin Farmer each scored three touchdowns to lead Saanich Vampires to an 89-0 romp over winless Saanich Wasps in one of two Junior Bantam Canadian Football Spring League games Sunday at Cedar Hill Park.

The win moved Vampires into sole possession of second place.

In the other game, Dale Wong scored three TDs to lead Oak Bay Crusaders to a 30-26 decision over Juan de Fuca Tigers. Steve Percival scored three majors for Tigers.

Castaways Tie For Cricket Lead

Castaways topped Nanaimo by six wickets Sunday at Beacon Hill Park to move into a tie for first place with Alcos in the Victoria and District Cricket Association.

In other Sunday matches, Oak Bay and Cowichan battled to a draw at Windsor Park and Incogs tripped Saanich by 63 runs in an exhibition encounter in Saanich.

Alcos trounced Albion by six wickets Saturday at Windsor Park.

Nanaimo was all out at 69 as Dave Auld set the bowling pace for Castaways by taking six wickets for the loss of 37 runs. Clubmate Bob Beecher took three for 19. Auld then scored 32, not out, while leading Castaways to 70 for four. Steve Petzing added 25.

Oak Bay batted first and reached 159 with Sandy Coquhoun contributing 28, not out, Dave Billingham adding 27 and Ken Aziz scoring 21. Tim Brierley led Cowichan bowlers at three for 33 and Tim Lord toppled two for 34.

Cowichan reached 116 for seven at close of play. Howard Martin led the up-Island batsmen with 61 and Brierley scored 29. Kortwright Richards took five wickets for 15 runs to set a brilliant bowling pace for Oak Bay.

Rob Wilson, Jeremy Goodwin and Dave Gladders each scored 21 to lead Incogs to 127. Gary Jones took four for 29 while bowling for Saanich, which was dismissed at 64. Anton Larsen (three for 19) and Ramin Lohrasb (two for 12) topped Incog bowlers.

On Saturday, Steve Hanson (four for 17) and Mark Hillis (four for 38) held Albion to only 69 runs all out. Malcolm Shanks set the batting pace for Albion with 32 runs. Trevor Bagot scored 23 to lead Alcos to 70 for four while clubmate John Campbell added 18.

Olympic Team In Final Prep

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canada's national soccer team will hold the final phase of its Olympic training program in Toronto on June 4 to 6 when coach Colin Morris brings together team members from squads based here and in Toronto.

We got off to a better start because we talked to our Gold Medal Banker about chequing and savings.

"We talked to our Gold Medal Banker and we're glad we did."

"He recommended a Chequable Savings Account for my wife. And a True Chequing Account for me, because I write most of our cheques. It's a perfect combination."

"My wife likes it because she can write cheques if she needs to. And at the same time, she still earns interest on her savings."

"My account allows me to pay our bills as economically as possible. And since I receive a concise monthly statement, it's easy to keep our records up-to-date."

There are a lot of good things that happen when you talk to your Bank of Montreal Gold Medal Banker. A Chequable Savings Account and a True Chequing Account are just two of them.

So come in today. And talk to your Gold Medal Banker about our Gold Medal Banking Service.

Good things will happen for you, too.

Ron-Tom Show Jolts East

EDMONTON (CP) — Teammates Ron Lancaster and Tom Campana of Saskatchewan Roughriders combined for two first-quarter touchdowns Saturday night and sparked the West to a 27-16 victory over the East in the Canadian Football League All Star game before a crowd of 21,762.

Lancaster opened the scoring with a 10-yard pass to Campana and the veterans combined on a 20-yarder with five minutes left in the same quarter and the West was never overtaken.

The most exciting play was a 97-yard punt return for a touchdown by Larry Highbaugh of Edmonton Eskimos early in the third quarter. The rest of the winners scoring was provided by Dave Cutler, also of Edmonton, who had three field goals and hit the upright from 50 yards out on a fourth attempt.

Art Green of Ottawa Rough Riders rammed over from four yards out in the first quarter for the Eastern touchdown. The remainder of the scoring was handled by Don Sweet of Montreal Alouettes with three field goals and a convert.

Cutler's successful kicks travelled 10, 27, and 47 yards. Sweet was good from 10, 24 and 43.

Lancaster, tied with Green in voting for the game's outstanding offensive player, combined with Campana for touchdowns the first two times the West had the ball. Tom Wilkinson of Edmonton, who quarterbacked half the game, was at the controls for marches leading to Cutler's field goals.

Tom Clements of Ottawa was the Eastern conference quarterback in the first quarter and Jerry Keeling of Hamilton Tiger Cats led the Eastern offence in the second quarter when Sweet connected on his three field goals.

Apart from Highbaugh's explosive return, there was little to excite the fans. Both clubs relied almost entirely on a passing attack and the West showed the benefit of standouts such as Campana and Rhett Dawson of Saskatchewan and George McGowen and Tyrone Wall of Edmonton.

Wayne Smith of British Columbia Lions, named the game's outstanding defensive player, combined with Saskatchewan defensive backs Lorne Richardson and Paul Williams to muffle the East's sporadic offence. The West intercepted four passes, two by Williams and one each by Highbaugh and Larry Carr of Calgary.

After the game, Marv Levy of Montreal Alouettes, the East's head coach, recommended future all-star games be played following the Grey Cup final, despite the possibility of poor weather in early December.

He said players would be in better shape after the regular season and fans would see "a truer pair of all-star teams"

Although some players were obviously not in peak condition, the only crippling injury occurred late in the second quarter when centre Wayne Conrad of Montreal injured his ankle and left the game. He returned later on crutches to watch from the sidelines.

Sandy Wins Four

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Favored Cascapedia took the $44,750 Honeymoon Handicap by 2½ lengths over Go March at Hollywood Park on Saturday, while Sandy Hawley of Toronto recorded four victories.

Willie Shoemaker kept Cascapedia close to the lead early in the mile and 1-6 turf event, then moved his mount to a commanding lead in the stretch. Go March rallied from far back to finish second.

Hawley, the leading rider in North America, had one of his wins aboard Masque Bleu, which returned $25.20 in the second. Masque Bleu combined with Lark's Regards, winner of the first, for a $1,064.30 daily double payoff.

First-Day Claim a Winner

VANCOUVER (CP) — My Boy K. K., a $4,000 claim on the opening day of the racing season at Exhibition Park, got his second win in a row Saturday in the allowance feature.

The one and one-sixteenth miles race for three-year-olds and up was the highlight of a card which had no stakes race, the only Saturday of the season without one.

My Boy K.K., a Kentucky bred by Monitor-Quiet Hour, won only one of five starts last season as a three year old. He started his 1976 campaign at a close to bottom claiming price. The horse finished sixth in the opener, but he was claimed by trainer George Cummins for Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Fediw and turned into a winner.

My Boy K. K. moved up in class, winning three of four for Cummins including Saturday's race.

He paid $11.30, $5.40 and $4.30. Run Jay paid $3.60, $2.50, while Moray Castle paid $3.90.

MILD

Dumont SELECT MILD cigarettes have been carefully developed to satisfy the two consistent requirements of Canadian smokers... effectively filtered mildness and good old-fashioned tobacco flavour.

Our researchers set themselves the double task of designing a filtration system that was the most efficient possible, and at the same time interfered least with the fine flavour of good tobacco.

Dumont SELECT MILD is the outstanding result of their labours...a completely new product which in every way satisfies the demands of the modern smoker for a sensibly filtered cigarette that delivers the rich tobacco flavour that smoking is all about.

Watch for the Dumont SELECT MILD display where you buy your cigarettes, and try this advanced new cigarette for yourself.

Mildness and flavour go together.

Warning: Health and Welfare Canada advises that danger to health increases with amount smoked—avoid inhaling. • King Size. Tar 9 mg. Nic. 0.6 mg.

Gallery Post Saves Match For Maltbie in Playoff

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — Roger Maltbie's approach was once-in-a-lifetime.

His four iron hooked left, struck a gallery post and caromed back on the green 20 feet from the hole, the third in a tense playoff duel Sunday with Hale Irwin. The dramatic turnaround enabled him to match Irwin's par four.

"Imagine," marvelled Maltbie, "think of the size of that pole from 170 yards."

One hole later, the 25-year-old bachelor sank an 18-foot birdie putt for the $40,000 first prize in Jack Nicklaus' inaugural $200,000 Memorial golf tournament.

A shaken Irwin, who won $22,800, was bitter.

"It looked like I had a chance to win when his ball was in the air," said the 1974 U.S. Open champion. "It was dead.

"He would have had a difficult time making par. I laugh now. I'll cry later. It's unbelievable the way things can turn around."

Irwin conceded Maltbie's luck may have had an affect on the decisive next hole, the difficult 437-yard 18th. Irwin's tee shot was next to a tree, his second in deep rough, his third in a bunker and his fourth 12 feet past the hole.

Irwin closed with a three-under-par 69 to Maltbie's 76. Their par 288s over the tree-lined, lake-studded 7,072 yards of Muirfield Village were, by seven shots, the highest totals of this season.

The game's greatest shotmakers struggled to 126 double bogeys in the last two rounds.

"It's the first time I can remember over half of the field failing to break 300," said Dom Mirandi, the tour's official scorer for 13 years.

Jack Nicklaus, who had a 292 that left him in an eighth-place tie, was proud of his creation.

"This was better than any I have won," said the champion of an unprecedented 16 majors.

Don Bies, the first-round leader, lipped a birdie putt that would have made it a three-way playoff. Instead, Bies' 75 gave him third place at 289.

Jerry Pate and Jerry McGee tied for fourth, Pate shooting 73 and McGee 74 on the warm, partly cloudy day. Lou Graham, the U.S. Open champion, shared sixth with Tom Kite. Graham matched par of 72. Kite had 73.

Rod Funseth and Nicklaus were next with Funseth finishing with a 77.

Hubert Green, the halfway leader, closed with 75-295 and earned $3,200.

ARNIE SINKS LONG ONE; TIES GARY FOR SECOND

SANWICH, England (AP) — Arnie Palmer holed a 20-footer on the last green for a one-over-par 71 Sunday to earn a share of second place after the third round of the Penfold PGA golf tournament over the Royal St. George's course.

Neil Coles, one of Britain's steadiest golfers, also holed out in 71 to move into first place with a three-round total of 70-69-71—210.

Tied with Palmer was Gary Player of South Africa with 68-70-73—211. Reigning champion Palmer's tally was 72-68-71—211.

Seaboard, Merchants Trim Royal Oak Margin

Seaboard Construction blanked Port Angeles Telecable 4-0 and Sooke Merchants defeated Matthews Heating 4-1 to gain a little ground on first-place Royal Oak Sporting Goods in Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League action Sunday at Central Park.

In the other league game, Juan de Fuca Builders nipped Telecable, 2-1.

Phil Berry struck out four batters and yielded only four hits in pitching Seaboard to victory and Glen Kilduff set the batting pace for the second-place club with a leadoff home run in the third inning.

Alden Govanlock set the pace for third-place Sooke with two hits — including a bases-empty homer in the first inning — on four trips to the plate, driving in two runs and scoring once.

The other two Sooke runs and the only Matthews tally came on opposition errors.

Denny Sullivan bashed out a triple to drive in Tom Gagnon for the lone Port Angeles run against Juan de Fuca in the second inning, but Len Banner singled in Peter Rumsby, who led off with a double to tie the score in the third frame. Steve Coleman scored the winning run for Builders on an error in the fourth.

At Sanscha Park, Ray Hummel cracked a two-run single in the sixth inning to give Sidney Hotel a 3-2 victory over Travelodge in a Sidney Men's Association game.

In the Heywood Men's League, Capital Builders edged Century Inn 7-6 in an 11-inning marathon Sunday at Heywood Avenue Park. Century had tripped Remco Office Supplies 9-6 in a makeup game Saturday on the same diamond.

Movers' Hurler Earns Two Wins

Roy Moretti picked up two victories Sunday, once as a starter and once in relief, while pitching Greaves Movers to 3-2 and 3-1 decisions over Farmer Construction in a Victoria Senior Amateur Baseball League doubleheader at Lambrick Park.

Moretti struck out seven batters and yielded two bases on balls during his first start of the season in the opener. He struck out two and walked none after coming in to relieve Ted Beech during the fifth inning of the eight-inning second game.

Rick Mark, the Greaves' catcher, scored what turned out to be the winning run in both games.

Mark had two singles in three trips to the plate in the opening game to drive in one run and scored the winner on a throwing error in the third inning.

In the second game, which was deadlocked 1-1 after the fifth inning, Mark drew a base on balls in the eighth. Dave Morgan connected for a single and Terry Karpiuk made it to first base when Farmers failed on a force play at third. George Lomas then scored Mark with a sacrifice fly and Ralph Anderson singled in Morgan for the insurance run.

Mt. Doug Makes It Seven In Battle with Claremont

Mt. Douglas survived the strongest challenge yet by perennial runner-up Claremont to caputure a seventh straight Vancouver Island high school track and field championship Saturday.

Despite powerful performances by Debbie Scott and the Claremont boys, who were competing on home grounds, Mt. Douglas edged the host school by 25 points to claim the crown.

The outcome was in doubt the entire afternoon until Mt. Douglas finally wrapped up the team title by winning the last two events of the two-day meet—the boys' and grils' 4x400-metre relays.

Mt. Doug finished with an aggregate total of 633 points, Claremont had 608 and Esquimalt placed third with 241. Cowichan was the leading up-Island entry with a four-place 181. Oak Bay finished fifth with 168.

Miss Scott, who was named the outstanding female athlete of the meet for the second straight year, led a record-breaking spree in five events despite adverse weather conditions that included gusty winds and occasional showers.

Miss Scott posted an impressive time of 4:34.6 in the 1,500 metres to slice three seconds off the mark she established last year.

But she was the only girl from Claremont to win an "A" event as Mt. Douglas retained the girls' team title with 338 points to Claremont's 208.

The situation was reversed in the boys' section, in which Derry Donaldson of Mt. Douglas was named the outstanding male athelte after setting one record and winning one other event. Claremont captured the boys' laurels with 400 points to Mt. Doug's 295.

Donaldson, who also won the 100 metres, knocked one-tenth of a second off the record with a time of 22.4 seconds in the 200 metres and anchored the winning Mt. Douglas 4x400 relay squad.

Alan Landess of Claremont added .35 metres to the pole vault standard by clearing 3.66 metres; Vince Miecznik of Shawnigan Lake pared 1.9 second off the 400-metre hurdles mark with a time of 58.1 and the Mt. Douglas girls' 4x400 relay team took .3 seconds off the record with a 4:03.7 clocking.

Mt. Douglas absolutely dominated the list of qualifiers for the B.C. championships scheduled for Friday and Saturday at Burnaby's Swangard Stadium.

The Stan Gill-coach crew finished with 13 individual atheletes qualified for 18 events and also managed to qualify all four relay teams while Claremont qualified eight athletes for 10 events and all four relay teams.

The top two finishers in each event from the Island meet qualified for the provincial championships but coaches can also petition to enter other athletes who have reached acceptable standards.

Ron Bowker, coach of Esquimalt, said he hopes to get a total of 11 athletes in the B.C. meet after his school qualified five athletes for 12 events.

Parkland qualified four athletes, Oak Bay had three, Spectrum and Alberni had two each and single athletes were qualified from Victoria, Belmont, Cowichan, Shawnigan Lake and Dunsmuir.

Jon Smith of Oak Bay, who won the 1,500 and 3,000 metres, won't compete at Burnaby because the meet conflicts with his school's graduation ceremonies.

WHY GOLIATH ISN'T LAUGHING ANYMORE.

Honda Civic, the up-start car, caused a few chuckles when it arrived to do battle. Because it appeared smallish, and not especially fearsome looking.

Honda Civic's true weapons were well hidden. And when it threw some numbers around and they connected, the giant soon came tumbling down.

Now Honda Civic is king: the best selling small car in all of Canada. It's a popular king, a powerful king, and a king that is familiar with a budget.

You can see the earth-shattering Civics at a Honda dealer.

He's probably just a stone's throw away.

Canada Wins UNICEF Help for Tiny Tots

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Canada has won a quiet victory by persuading the United Nations Children's Fund to refocus its aims and give more help to the tiny tots of the underdeveloped world.

Canada considers that UNICEF, as it is popularly known, has been spending too much time and money on community projects and adolescent education. It feels that children under five are the real hope for the future and it wants to see more devoted to their care and feeding.

In the Canadian view, the period from birth to age five is the most critical stage in a child's development. If not given proper feed and care in that early growth period, the child never will reach his full mental and physical potential. No amount of aid 10 or 20 years later can overcome the deficiencies of early childhood.

Canadas speaks in the councils of UNICEF with some experience and authority. She has been associated with UNICEF since its inception and is the fourth-largest contributor. The Canadian government provides $5 million annually, plus another $5 million to $10 million in emergency relief, and non-governmental organizations in Canada put up another $3 million a year. That's a fair chunk of the current UNICEF budget of $90.8 million.

Canada pressed its point on child care in a working paper placed before a current meeting of the Fund's board of directors. The board said it found no fundamental diffeence between the Canadian intent and the current UNICEF program and therefore found it unnecessary to revise its policies.

The Canadian delegate, Norbert Prefontaine, who guides international welfare programs in the Canadian health department, pronounced himself "startled" that the board and the Canadian delegation could reach such "diametrically opposed conclusions."

Prefontaine pressed the Canadian position, pointing to scientific data on the early formative years of childhood and urging that formal education and other services to youngsters and adolescents be financed through other sources. The target population for UNICEF should be preschool children and their mothers.

"What the Canadian position does say is that UNICEF cannot forever be everything to everybody," said Prefontaine.

The board quickly reassessed its position and agreed that Canada was right; it was time for UNICEF to refocus its aims and priorities.

UNICEF now has programs in 103 countries, including 45 in Africa, 25 in Asia, 22 in the American continents and 11 in the Eastern Mediterranean. Of its $90.8-million budget this year, about $76 million will will go into assistance and the remainder into administration.

Canada wants UNICEF to get down to the basics of child care, such as teaching mothers how to look after their infants and seeing that children get adequate nutrition, clean water and injections to ward off disease. The care also would extend to pregnant women.

The UNICEF board felt that a shift in emphasis would leave gaps in the aid provided to the communities in which the children live.

SYMPATHETIC EAR ON RAIL

NANAIMO ZCP(— The B.C. Conservative MPs caucus offered a sympathetic ear to Cumberland Mayor Bill Moncrief when he presented a brief on CP Rail proposals to discontinue rail service to his area of Vancouver Island.

Howard Johnston, MP for Okanagan Kootenay, said the caucus recognized the problems for upper island areas if rail traffic were ended and its load was suddenly shunted onto the highways.

Johnston said the MPs felt the mayor and others concerned with the issue should have made greater use of the opposition in Parliament.

The cost of repairs to trestles would not be as high as the railway claimed when taken into consideration with profits made from land sales, he said.

Clerk Quits At Kelowna

KELOWNA (CP) — Paul Douville, city clerk-personnel officer, has resigned to take up a position as city administrator in Duncan, at the end of July.

He said the resignation was not a result of a controversy at city hall last year, but because of a "tremendous job offer" from Duncan.

Douville was suspended by city council Dec. 9 for tampering with a letter addressed to Mayor Bill Treadgold.

Treadgold resigned his post Feb. 3 when council refused to make public full details of the events leading up to Douville's suspension. He claimed such disclosure was necessary to save the remaining public trust in the city administrators.

Accept Profit Guide: Chretien

PENTICTION (CP) — Canadian businessmen should accept the new profit guidelines announced in the federal budget last week in order to bolster the public's confidence in the anti-inflation program, Jean Chretien, president of the treasury board, said Saturday.

He told the annual meeting of the B.C. Chamber of Commerce that acceptance of the guidelines by the business community would help to show the public that the anti-inflation program will bring all forms of income, including profit, under effective control.

"You are no doubt aware that since last October, profit guidelines have been considered by many to be the weakest link in the program," he said. "In my view, acceptance of the new regulations is the price which the business community must pay to ensure the widest possible support for the anti-inflation program."

Chretien said several features of the guidelines should commend them to businessmen — the dividened freeze will end Oct. 15 and firms will be allowed to increase their annual payments to shareholders by up to eight per cent.

The guidelines also include a minimum rate of return for all firms so none will be forced to hold its price in the face of an excessively low rate of return or operate at a loss.

Commenting on the budget, Chretien said it is a "time and patience budget."

He said with the budget the Canadian economy should achieve a real gross national product growth rate of five per cent this year.

He urged chamber members to have the confidence to "stay on the chosen course, steering away from the twin shoals of higher inflation and higher unemployment."

The minister said it is beyond the power of the federal government to restrain expenditures of all levels of government.

"The co-operation of the province and municipalities is absolutely essential," he said. "All the provinces should not just cut back on programs financed from the provincial treasury but also on those involving federal funding."

"The reason is quite simple. Transfers to provinces absorb about one-fifth of total federal expenditures. Effective spending restraint necessarily means restraint in transfers to other levels of government."

Mining Recovery Pinned to Taxes

PENTICTON (CP) — Recovery from the deep trouble the B.C. mining industry has been in recently depends on the recovery of world demands for Canada's minerals and rapid correction of taxation policy errors, Ralph Sultan, chief economist of the Royal Bank of Canada, said Saturday.

Sultan, of Toronto, told delegates at the annual meeting of the B.C. Chamber of Commerce that change in taxation policy, especially at the provincial level, is the most important of the two essentials for B.C.'s mining industry.

He said the trouble in the industry is well confirmed by statistics which show exploration spending down by 60 per cent in the period of 1972 to 1975 and new mine expenditures down 85 per cent for the same period.

Claims staking was down 85 per cent, free mining certificates issued to corporations down 65 per cent and certificates to individuals down 25 per cent.

"These are alarming statistics," he said.

The estimated return on capital for the metal mining industry last year was only 5.8 per cent, Sultan said. This was one-half the profit rate in 1974.

Sultan said total metal mining profits are down again for the first quarter of this year, contrary to the trend in most other sectors of the economy.

He said invested capital for metal mining could decline even further this year, to the five per cent range.

"We are not expecting an early turn-around in the Canadian metal mining profit picture," he said.

Polynesian Canoe Is Back on Target

HONOLULU (UPI) — The Polynesian sailing canoe Hokule'a, travelling across the South Pacific without modern navigational equipment, corrected its course Sunday to make up for excessive westward movement.

The change made it possible for the 60-foot, double-hulled canoe to reach its planned destination of Papeete, Tahiti, and may prove the accuracy of ancient Polynesian star navigation.

Position reports received the past week from the Hokule'a escort vessel, the Medtai, via the navy-marine Mars radio system showed the Hokule'a was heading too far westward to land at Tahiti.

The Hokule'a left Maui May 1 on the experimental voyage to test ancient Polynesian skills and canoe design.

'WHITE MAN'S NATION' SAYS KLANS' WIZARD

PULASKI, Tenn. (AP) — "It's a white man's nation," the Imperial Wizard of the United Klans of America told a Memorial Day weekend Bicentennial rally here at the disputed birthplace of the Ku Klux Klan.

The address was followed by the ritual burning of a 15-foot cross in the 66-acre rented field.

"Ours is the culture that must continue if we're going to survive as a Christian nation," Imperial Wizard Robert Shelton told white-robed and hooded Klansmen on Saturday night.

"The blacks themselves recognize they cannot provide the leadership necessary for their survival, therefore they turn to the whites," Shelton told about 1,000 followers.

He said three days of continuous rain in the area was responsible for the poor attendance, keeping "approximately 20,000 people or more at home."

Public Announcement

Ottawa, May 21, 1976.

REQUEST FOR APPLICATIONS FOR CABLE TELEVISION SERVICE TO SERVE THE COUNTY OF LEEDS, ONTARIO.

The Canadian Radio-Television Commission announces that it is prepared to receive applications for cable television broadcasting licences to serve the county of Leeds, Ontario.

Applications should be filed on or before August 20, 1976.

All applicants planning the use of microwave must submit details of routes and costs. In particular applicants should submit the following:

a) Where microwave is to be provided by a common carrier, a copy of an agreement in principle between the common carrier and the applicant should be submitted. Details of any proposals by common carriers for the use of microwave, the cost of the service and charges levied by the common carrier should also be included. In the event that the application pertains to an existing or proposed microwave network all details relating to cost sharing arrangements with other applicants or licensees which are, or are proposing to, participate in the network must be provided.

b) Where microwave is to be provided by an applicant, or the applicant proposes the use of privately owned non-common carrier microwave facilities, the application must include detailed information on all microwave costs. In the event that such a proposal involves more than one cable television undertaking or proposed undertaking all details relating to cost sharing arrangements with other applicants or licensees which are, or proposing to, participate in the arrangement must be provided.

c) The applications must include full details as to the site of the distant head-end and the proposed microwave routing. Detailed costs relating to the establishment and/or use of the distant head-end facility, as well as any agreements pertaining to the establishment and/or use of the facility must be provided.

d) All applications must indicate the monthly subscriber fee including the cost of microwave service.

Persons wishing to apply are reminded of the eligibility requirements laid down by the Governor General in Council in Directions to the Commission, Orders in Council, P.C. 1969-2229 as amended and P.C. 1972-1569. The Commission expects to consider any application meeting these eligibility requirements.

Potential applicants are also reminded that in the Commission's past decisions and policy announcements the Commission has required that licensees have effective ownership and control of local headends, amplifiers and drops in their cable television undertakings.

The Commission will not consider any cable television applications which are predicated on the video-taping of television signals unless all the necessary authorizations have been received in writing and filed with the Commission.

Potential applicants are reminded that in past decisions the Commission has not approved all available non-Canadian stations which involved the duplicate carriage of non-Canadian networks.

As well, upon hearing applications for the locations in question, the Commission will request:

a) the licensees of the local television broadcasting stations whose A or B contours fall within the territories applied for pursuant to this announcement to file such documentary evidence and to make such representations as they consider necessary concerning the probable effect of the licensing of cable television undertakings within these service contours on the continued viability of such stations, and

b) the licensees of local television stations and each cable applicant to explain the actions taken or proposed to be taken individually and co-operatively to ensure the continuing availability and quality of "off air" television service.

The Commission will announce at a later date the time and place of the Public Hearing where these applications will be considered and where they may be examined by the public. The particulars of each application will also be published in the newspapers of the area proposed to be served.

The public will then have the opportunity to submit comments on any application by filing a written intervention with the undersigned and by giving a copy to the applicant and by giving a copy to the applicant at least fifteen (15) days before the Hearing.

Guy Lefebvre,
Director-General of Licensing.

Convict-Writer Nets $21,240

SAN QUENTIN, Calif. — Free-lance writer Bobby Wheeler made $21,240 in the last year. He is engaged to be married next month, and he lives comfortably with almost no expenses.

Wheeler is serving a 10-year-to-life sentence in San Quentin prison for armed robbery.

Since last June, the 28-year-old convict has sold stories to Playboy, Penthouse, Redbook, Sports Illustrated and Boys' Life and worked on scripts for two TV shows — Policewoman and On the Rocks.

He says prison life is comfortable, that he likes stealing, and that his return address probably helps sell his articles.

"The biggest problems with California prisons is that they're comfortable," he says, adding that if they weren't, people wouldn't be as apt to come back.

There were no injuries.

NEW ORLEANS (UPI — Eddie Taylor hung on to an ice chest in the middle of choppy Lake Pontchartrain for nine hours with his wife and a friend — but he was never really worried.

"I knew sooner or later somebody would call the Coast Guard and they would find us," Taylor said Sunday after the three were rescued.

Chances Appear Slim For Guaranteed Income

OTTAWA (CP) — Welfare ministers meet this week to decide the fate of a long-discussed guaranteed income system.

Though chances appears slim, Welfare Minister Marc Lalonde says he is optimistic the provinces will agree at the two-day meeting on a double-barrelled program to guarantee minimum incomes for so-called unemployable people and supplement the earnings of the working poor.

But even if agreement is reached, it still would be some time before the plan is implemented. Any federal-provincial accord would have to be followed by legislation and Lalonde concedes there isn't enough money to finance such a program yet anyway.

Additionally, steps to slice $300 million from the unemployment insurance program, announced in last week's federal budget, appear to reflect a hardening government attitude against income support programs.

And Finance Minister Donald Macdonald said no new taxes would be levied to pay for additional social security programs when he told the Commons the day after his budget speech:

"Any changes will have to fit themselves within the fiscal framework which the federal and provincial governments have set themselves for this year and subsequent years."

When the welfare ministers last met in February, Lalonde predicted an agreement on the guaranteed income system would be reached at this week's meeting.

Since then, however, he and Ontario officials have become locked in a controversy over how much the plan would add to the estimated $13 billion already spent each year on social security.

Ontario maintains the proposals would have cost more than $3 billion had they been in effect last year. Mr. Lalonde dismisses that figure as a "fiscal fairy tale," arguing that the 1975 cost would have been $350 million.

Lalonde says Ontario's figures are based on a much more extensive proposal — one he says would have cost about $1 billion — that has since been trimmed.

That proposal, one of a number discussed during three years of talks that have led up to this week's meeting, would have shored up the income of all poor people who either couldn't find a job, had a physical disability or were forced to stay at home to tend to heavy family duties.

Lalonde's latest suggestions would drop single people and childless couples under 55 who would have been eligible for benefits from the program.

For its part, Ontario says it will consider any cheaper federal plans for guaranteed income system. But both Ontario and British Columbia are expected to resist federal proposals now up for discussion.

As it stands, Ottawa says it will pay half the cost of guaranteeing an annual income for unemployable people up to a yet-to-be decided limit. And it will pick up two-thirds of the cost of supplementing the pay of the working poor to make sure their incomes remain above welfare rates.

Benefits proposed by the federal government for this second scheme are understood to be $36 a month for household heads, $24 a month for spouses and $10 a month for each child.

Although Ottawa would shoulder the lion's share of the cost, it has agreed to let provinces administer the plan.

Some province's such as Quebec, appear ready to accept the federal plan at this week's meeting. And though it is unlikely, Lalonde says the federal government could go ahead without approval from all provinces should it wish.

Spurned Cabbie Bops His Fare On the Head

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police are looking for a cab driver who clubbed his female fare over the head early Sunday after she rejected his overtures to her.

Dorothy Wright, 44, told police she left work, then went to a downtown hotel to drink beer before catching a taxi.

When she arrived at her destination, she paid the driver who then made a pass at her.

When she refused he opened her door and, while driving away, pushed her from the cab. He then stopped the taxi, got out and clubbed her over the head, police said.

Officers found the woman semi-conscious in a nearby lane with a deep wound on the side of her head and a cut on the left hand.

Drink Figures Mislead?

TORONTO (CP) — Statistics are being used in a misleading manner to support arguments for raising Ontario's legal drinking age, says Dr. Richard Gilbert, a psychologist in the province's Addiction Research Foundation.

The real problem is excessive drinking by adults, he said in an interview.

A recent report by the Ontario Youth Secretariat blamed the July, 1971 decrease in the legal drinking age to 18 years from 21 for an increase in teenage drinking and involvement in alcohol-related traffic accidents.

Dr. Gilbert said a change in the law lowering the legal drinking age had a negligible impact on teen-age driving behaviour. An increase in the legal age by one year likely would accomplish little.

Statistics show a seven-tenths of one per cent increase in the accident rate among 16-to 19-year-olds between 1968 and 1973, he said.

He suggested the teen-age population had already been drinking before the law was changed.

Indications that there was an immediate increase in impaired driving offences might be explained by police being particularly conscious, because of the publicity, about the possibility of young drivers drinking.

He said alcohol statistics indicate comsumption may be reaching a plateau in Ontario.

Average consumption for a person in the 15 years-and-up group increased 6.9 per cent between 1972 and 1975. This was less than the one-year increase of 7.9 per cent between 1971 and 1972, he said.

Dr. Gilbert said that in the year ending March 31, 1975, the increase was four-tenths of one per cent and provisional figures to March 31 of this year indicate an increase of less than five-tenths of one per cent.

Pickets Pulled

VANCOUVER (CP) — Pickets were withdrawn Saturday night from the Roberts Bank coal port after representatives of Kaiser resources Ltd. and the United Mineworkers of America met to discuss the rollback of wage increases by the federal Anti-Inflation Board.

A company spokesman said an application for an injunction prohibiting picketing would be withdrawn.

Lawyers for Westshore Terminals Ltd., a Kaiser subsidiary which operates the port, filed the application Saturday.

After the pickets withdrew, operations at the coal port resumed.

The picketing followed a strike by the mineworkers against Kaiser's coal operation at Sparwood, in southeastern B.C., to protest the rollback.

Habitat Bomb Scare

VANCOUVER (CP) — A bomb scare forced Habitat Forum officials to order evacuation of a display building at the Forum's refurbished air base site here Saturday, a Forum security official said.

The security official said that nothing was found in the search of the refurbished hanger which contains booths displaying literature on "alternative technology," such as solar energy systems.

A person telephoned a Vancouver radio station to say that a bomb would go off in the hanger at 2:45 p.m., the security official said.

People were allowed to return to the display area as soon as the search was concluded.

Fred Emmerson, Vancouver Island district manager of the post office department, said as many as 8,000 pieces of wrongly-addressed mail have been received by the post office weekly and the directories are to help in addressing letters to businesses in Victoria, Sidney, Brentwood Bay, Saanichton and Sooke.

THIS ROOM is divided between study and sleeping areas, but because it is one large room, it could easily be arranged with desk and bed in each half so that each child would have own space.

Squeeze Play

Free For The Asking

By PAULINE GRAVES

We live in a space conscious age, and not just outer space consciousness, but space in relation to our own lives. We talk about room sizes, because today's homes, with three bedrooms and a family room, have the same overall square footage as two-bedroom and den houses of thirty years ago, the result of inflation and rising building costs. So we try to make small rooms seem as large as they used to be.

Given the choice of two small rooms or one that is large for two small children, take the large. You'll find it quite flexible. You can divide a room in half, one side for study or crafts, with desks along opposite walls, and the other for sleeping, with two twin beds along the walls. And the demarcation is quite clear between the two areas, thanks to 4" x 4" posts at the foot of each bed and an overhead 4" x 12" beam.

Adjustable louvred blinds fill the space between beam and floor to make the separation more complete. This also affords good light control, if one youngster wants to work at his desk and the other wants to sleep. This seldom happens, of course, but it eliminates a possible source of conflict.

The blinds have the advantage of light control because of the maneuverability of the louvres, but also they can be raised to open up the space completely, an advantage over roll-up shades.

Schnecken (Cookies)

SCHNECKEN

- 4 cups, sifted all-purpose flour
- 1½ cups margarine or butter
- 3 eggs, separated
- 1 cup sour cream
- 2 teaspoons vanilla
- Confectioners' sugar to dust rolling surface
- 3 tablespoons sifted confectioners' sugar
- Sugar
- Cinnamon

Place in a large mixing bowl the flour and margarine. Cut fat into flour as for pastry. Add slightly beaten egg yolks, sour cream and 1 teaspoon of the vanilla. Mix well. Chill.

When ready to bake, divide dough into 8 parts. Roll each part into a circle on a board dusted with confectioners' sugar. Cut into 8 or 10 wedges.

In a bowl beat the egg whites until foamy. Gradually add the 3 tablespoons sifted confectioners' sugar while beating. Fold in 1 teaspoon vanilla. Brush rolled dough with egg mixture. Sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon.

Roll each wedge loosely, starting at wide end. Brush rolled slices with egg [illegible]. Sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon. Place on greased cookie sheet.

Bake in 400-degree oven for 10 to 12 minutes or until golden brown.

Note: This dough is easier to handle if it is kept chilled. Try this: Ball up the dough into the bottom of a bowl. Draw section marks on it, as if peeling an orange. Cut out and roll one section at a time. Keep rest of dough refrigerated.

Makes about 80 cookies.

Cheddar Cheese Still an Excellent Buy

Cheddar type cheese has great appeal to those seeking a source of easily prepared nutrition without waste. Although the price shot up at the same time meat prices rose a couple of years ago, the fact that there is no shrinkage waste in a one-pound block of Cheddar, brings it into a favorable comparison.

While most of us have preferences in flavors and textures of cheese, the Cheddar-type Canadian cheese sold in bulk is the best buy. For general daily meal use, mild Canadian is good. Watch for a special on this item, a dollar 39 cents a pound, sometimes at a dollar 19 cents instead of a dollar 69 cents a pound — a very worthwhile saving. Try to buy two or three pounds to keep in refrigerator.

Wrap each piece in an outer covering of waxed paper. Keep in cold section but not in freezer section.

Cheddar cheese flavor is improved at room temperature — that is, remember to take out the chunk currently in use (in its covered dish) and set it on the kitchen counter ready for lunch. If you have a cool cupboard, keep dish there for day by day use.

For one person preparing meals, cheese is a great work and time saver, yet it offers variety. It can be used in many uncooked dishes as an extender for a very small portion of meat or in place of meat. Combined with finely chopped celery, parsley, chives, a mushroom or two, it makes either a great salad, or a sandwich filling on wholewheat bread spread with peanut butter. Add a couple of green lettuce leaves and you won't be lacking energy for an afternoon's work.

In using cheese as a source of protein we make a point of not being skimpy. In value charts, cheddar cheese is rated on the basis of a one-inch cube weighing about 17 grams or three quarters of an ounce.

At this rate a pound of cheese will last two weeks for one person using a little more than a one-inch cube each day.

This figure of 26 pounds for a year's cheese consumption is near the amount suggested by Kay Spicer, the Toronto home economist when in Victoria recently. Anyone enjoying cheese will be agreeable to the idea, since it does indeed add not only more high grade protein than the same weight in hamburger but also more calcium, much more vitamin A and for weight-watchers, less fat than the hamburger.

In addition to the instant meals with cheese outlined above, more complicated though money-saving ideas may be welcomed for a family meal.

Pielets can be made up ahead of a planned picnic either outdoors at home or in a neighboring park to avoid highway travelling and expense.

These pielets are based on a dish originating in Russia where the filling was usually cabbage and rice; but the type of filling varies with the European countries now enjoying these delicious savory little pies.

In keeping with our cheese theme, today's pielets contain a mixture of rice, egg, onion, mushroom and cheese.

According to taste, include more onion and more mushrooms in the filling. And use a touch of curry powder if liked.

For picnic eating, individual pielets can be more easily handled; for table serving at home a shallow pie is more quickly assembled. A 12-inch pizza pie pan is ideal for family serving with a thin layer of pastry below and over the filling.

Picnic Pielets

Pastry:

- 1 cup wholewheat flour
- 2 cups unbleached flour
- ½ tsp. salt
- 2 Tbsp. wheat germ
- ¾ cup soft margarine
- 1 slightly beaten small egg
- 3 Tbsp. lemon juice
- ¼ cup cold water (approx.)

Sift together dry ingredients into mixing bowl; toss in remaining wheat germ. Fork in soft margarine until of crumby texture.

Add egg beaten with lemon juice (include pulp). With large fork, gradually add cold water, using only enough to form ball of dough.

This dough may now be wrapped in plastic and kept on refrigerator shelf until making up the Pielets.

Filling:

- 2 Tbsp. soft margarine
- ¼ cup fine chopped onion
- ¼ cup fine chopped celery
- 1 Tbsp. chopped parsley
- 1 mint leaf chopped fine
- 1 cup cooked brown rice
- 2 or 3 chopped mushrooms
- ½ cup grated Cheddar cheese

Melt margarine in frypan. Add chopped onion and cook gently until yellowed; push aside and add celery, parsley, mint and mushrooms, and another tablespoon margarine if necessary to cook these vegetables for 5 minutes until nearly soft.

Now add cooked rice, mix well. Remove from heat. Stir in grated cheese and set aside until cold before filling pastry.

If wanted at once to make a large pie, spread cooked mixture on large platter to cool well while rolling out pastry base and top crust.

Halve the ball of dough. Roll out one portion thinly on waxed paper to size of baking pan. Fit into pan, easing it in with fingers. Spread with cooled filling.

Roll out second piece, and with aid of waxed paper get it safely into place on top of filling. Pinch edges together; and make a few tiny prick marks with fork over surface.

Bake in hot oven at 219 deg. C. for 5 minutes; reduce to fairly hot 205 deg. C. and bake for total of 30 minutes.

For pielets, roll dough to one-eighth inch thickness; cut into 3½-inch circles (use a cup or mug); put a teaspoon filling in centre of each circle. Fold over and pinch edges together. Place on ungreased cookie sheet.

Bake as above for about 20 minutes or until lightly brown.

Law Provides Child Support But How About Enforcement?

elizabeth forbes

Did you know that under the law, every parent is liable for the support of his or her children? Yet, at the same time, the Court has provided no effective enforcement mechanisms, and across Canada many fathers liable for support payments to their children fail to obey the Court order.

Did you know that the amount of maintenance awarded to a wife upon the breakdown of marriage depends on her conduct during marriage?

In other words, maintenance is used as "punishment." Under the law, emphasis is on conduct or "fault" in determining both the liability to pay maintenance and the amount payable.

Did you know that child support payments are based on what is left over after a parent has made payment on his new sports car, boat, camper, etc?

This is because the application of the law gives priority to ordinary civil debts over a man's obligation to his children.

These are truths you will find in a neat printed folder titled For Better, For Worse, produced by the Victoria Status of Women Action Group with the sole purpose of letting you know what the marriage laws in our province actually cover as they are worded today — and what the Berger Royal Commission on Family Law proposes in reforms.

The folder strives to correct some ideas in regard to marriage and family law that so often are considered to be truths.

For instance, if you believe that all possessions, property and assets acquired during marriage are shared equally and divided equally upon dissolution of the marriage, you are quite wrong.

According to the SWAG folder, the law assumes that the husband, as wage earner, owns the property. The wife is seen as a dependent spouse.

You are also away off base if you think that if a wife has contributed out of her earnings to a piece of property, then she is automatically entitled to a share as part owner of that property.

The word is not "automatically." Under the Married Women's Property Act, a married woman is "allowed" to maintain separate property; she must be able to PROVE that the money was her own (not provided as housekeeping, for example.)

It's also wrong to believe that if a husband gives a gift of property to his wife, or if a wife gives her husband a gift of property, each is entitled to keep that gift should the marriage break down.

The wife can keep the gift. The husband must return his gift as the law assumes the wife merely gave it to him to hold in trust for her.

And don't think for a minute that even though a wife works at home and does not bring any wages to the family, her contribution in caring for husband and children is seen as equally important under the law.

The law measures contributions in terms of economic factors.

The folder goes on to tell us that in examining the laws pertaining to marriage, the Berger Commission found that the legal assumptions of the law were often quite different from the assumptions held by married couples about their marriage.

That surveys done in Alberta and England showed that the vast majority of married couples see marriage as a partnership and feel that they share all assets equally. Similar attitudes exist in British Columbia.

However, if these married couples were to dissolve their marriages they would find the law assumes nothing of the kind.

Therefore the Berger Commission proposes a system of community and joint management of property acquired during marriage.

This means (1) all assets are shared equally that are acquired during marriage; (2) the wife, therefore, has an equal right to half of all assets both during and at the break-up of the marriage; and (3) this system does not define "roles" for each partner. The partners can operate their marriage as they like.

Up to the present, our provincial government has not acted on any of the Berger Commission recommendations pretaining to marriage and community property.

And until it does enact the Berger Commission recommendations, the current laws prevail, and there is no equality in marriage before the law.

Al-Anon Can Help

DEAR ABBY: My mother-in-law phoned from the police station to say she had been arrested for drunk driving, so we went to get her out and drive her car home. (I'm surprised she hasn't been picked up before now.)

My husband drove her car home, and if they had given HIM a breath test, he would have been in trouble because he'd been drinking beer all day and was far from sober.

I've known that my husband has had a drinking problem for a long time, but he won't admit it, and no amount of nagging will change his mind.

He wonders why our sex life has diminished, but it's hard to be lovely dovey with a man who is drunk and unable to function half the time.

How does a woman who really loves her husband help him if he refuses to admit that he has a problem?—BLUE.

DEAR BLUE: She calls Al-Anon. It's a self-help group that counsels the families of alcoholics. You need to learn how to cope with problem drinkers, and Al-Anon does an excellent job. They're in your phone book. Get going and good luck.

DEAR ABBY: I read about the woman whose husband destroyed all their credit cards. You said since she was employed she could have credit cards issued in her name. That's fine if she has an independent income, but what about women who are NOT employed, such as farm wives who help run the farm? Or the housewife whose work consists of keeping house and raising the children?

I think the Equal Opportunity Act discriminates against women who are not employed outside the home. Why not include all women and let the chips fall where they may?

You gave a good answer to the working women, but what about the rest of us?—ROBERTA

DEAR ROBERTA: If a housewife or "farm wife" has no income other than her husband's, she cannot qualify for an independent credit card. And certainly not if her husband won't pay the bills and destroys the joint cards.

Credit cards are issued on proven ability to pay. Women who are financially dependent on their husbands have no credit of their own. It may be "unfair," but it's another fact of life that needs changing.

Makeup Removal Vital

Ask Jennifer

Taking off your make-up can be as time-consuming as putting it on. The results of a slap-dab job are those familiar panda-bear circles of mascara under the eye and patches of cheek blusher on your best pillowcases in the morning. Here are some ponters on how to remove make-up effectively:

Dear Jennifer: I always have black circles under my eyes and on my cheeks in the morning. How can I remove my mascara so that it doesn't continue to smear?—Muriel T.

Dear Muriel: Don't leave mascara on all night. It can dry your lashes and break them off. It can also give you the feeling you have sand in your eyes in the morning.

Facial cleansers don't do a good job of removing mascara. Some mascaras are so waterproof that nothing except an eye make-up remover product will work.

Wash out a spiral brush from a used mascara container. Dip it in eye make-up remover, petroleum jelly, baby oil or whatever does a good job and doesn't irritate your eyes. Brush your eyelashes just as you would to apply mascara. Catch them between tissue and gently wipe off the mascara. A second application is necessary if the tissue shows black traces.

There are eyelash conditioners available now that paint on just like a mascara but are designed to keep your lashes soft, supple and silky. It's a good investment if you are addicted to four coats of mascara and a hard clamp in an eyelash curler.

Dear Jennifer: I have purchased an elaborate cleansing system for my skin. There are three or four steps and a number of products to use in different places. But the system is so complicated I often can't be bothered going through it all, so I sleep in my make-up.

Is there a quick program for facial cleansing that would do the same job for my skin that this plan promised?—Rita J.

Dear Rita: You've spent your money on a beautiful idea. Unfortunately it doesn't fit into your lifestyle. Cleansing, refining and moisturizing are all any skin-care products can offer. Your "elaborate system" will do just that — but only if you use it.

Cleansing can be achieved by creaming off heavy make-up with a simple cream, soaping lightly and rinsing well. Add a touch of moisturizer after you blot dry and you're finished in two minutes.

You do bring up a common problem: that is, forcing yourself into a routine that you know you'll never follow through on. Wishful thinking, perhaps? Expensive, certainly. Doomed to failure? Of course. But it's your skin that suffers from not even a minimal, intelligent bit of care.

Nightly cleansing of the skin is a must.

You Can Cut Those Hot Water Bills

By A. J. HAND

(c) 1976, Popular Science

Of all the energy you consume in your home every year, about 15 per cent goes to heat water. Putting it another way, 25 cents of every dollar you spend to heat your home, you spend on heating water. That adds up to a lot of money and a lot of energy. But most homeowners tend to ignore the expense because it's buried in their gas or electric bills — mixed in with other energy expenses and hard to scrutinize.

If you're interested in saving money and energy, your hot-water system and your hot-water use habits offer opportunities for significant savings with very little effort on your part. Here are some of them:

—Set your water heater thermostat no higher than 120. Higher settings waste heat and shorten the life of the heater tank. Note: Dishwashers need 140-degree water to work at their best but most have their own heaters.

—Twice a year drain a couple gallons of water out the faucet at the bottom of the hot-water tank. This removes deposits that cut efficiency and can cause popping sounds.,

—Turn the heater thermostat all the way down when you leave home for a weekend or longer. No point in keeping a tankful of water hot when it won't be used.

—Fix all dripping water faucets and pipes.

—Insulate hot-water pipes with the fiberglass tape made for the purpose. Installation is wraparound simple.

—Consider installing a tempering tank like the one shown in the sketch. During the summer it will preheat water to room temperature for free, before it enters the water heater. This rise of some 20-30 degrees can save a lot of money. And it shortens the time the heater needs to reheat water after a period of heavy usage. Note: During the winter your furnace provides the room temperature that heats the water-tempering tank, so wintertime tempering isn't free. It merely transfers some of the water-heating load from your heater to your furnace. But in the summertime it cuts costs.

—Always wash full loads whenever you use clothes or dish washers.

—Always wash clothes in cold water. This is better for your clothes as well as your pocketbook.

—Favor showers over baths and short showers over leisurely showers. Consider an ultra-fine-spray shower head. The finer the spray, the less water you need to wash and rinse. Installation is simple.

—Foot pedal controls for the kitchen faucet are another way to save hot water. With foot control you run the water only when you need it.

—Heat small amounts of water for coffee, soups, and so forth on the stove. This wastes less heat than running the tap until you get hot water, then having a pipe full of hot water to cool off. And remember to heat no more water than you need. Want a cup of coffee? Heat a cup of water. Turn off the heat once the water boils.

—Should you ever need to replace your water heater, choose one that uses energy efficiently.

By LYNN and JOEL RAPP

DEAR LYNN and JOEL:

Re your column on piggybacks wilting due to lack of water, do you know that overwatering, letting the plant stand in water too long or too much heat also cause wilt?—A.J.

DEAR A.J.

No, but if you hum a few bars, we'll fake it. (Ouch!) Yes, we did know that, but generally, with the piggpback, it's lack of water that causes it to droop. The things you mentioned in your letter are bad for any plant and it's a good rule to make sure your plants aren't subjected to that kind of treatment and, for that matter, don't subject yourself to any of those things, either. Especially the heat part.

This may be repetitive, but it's vital to understand that, even though most house plants are originally from tropical climes and are cultivated in captivity in "hothouses," they will and do adjust very nicely to a temperature anywhere above 63 deg. F.

Unless you can supply the same kind of humidity provided in Hawaii or Miami or wherever, be sure to keep your plants away from dry heat as much as possible. If you feel yourself beginning to wilt, you know it's about to affect the plants.

Broke Into Pharmacy Alone—Accused

A 25-year-old man who pleaded guilty at the start of a narcotic trafficking trial in Victoria County Court testified Friday he committed a pharmacy break-in alone and took narcotics which police found later in a motel room.

Alain Rosaire LaForest was called to give evidence by Wendell Sinclair Lewis, 25, accused of possession of codeine and pethidine for the purpose of trafficking in Victoria Jan. 27.

Lewis and two other persons, Irene Janine Jolin, 20, and Lorie Elizabeth Knight, 17, pleaded not guilty at the outset of the trial Tuesday while LaForest pleaded guilty. All four who are from Vancouver were jointly charged.

Judge E. J. C. Stewart directed the jury to acquit Ms. Jolin and Ms. Knight Friday saying there was no evidence of knowledge and control over substances referred to in the idictment.

LaForest told the jury and Judge E. J. C. Stewart that he and Lewis left a Gorge Road motel around 7:30 p.m. Jan. 26 and walked to the Town and Country Shopping Centre where they parted company.

He said it was his intention to look for a place to break into but he didn't discuss his plans with Lewis and didn't tell him where he was going after they parted.

LaForest said he checked the Saanich Medical Centre building near the shopping centre and found it had "an easy lock to pick."

Inside, he took some birth control pills, rubber golves, broke into the narcotics drawer and took all the drugs which were there, and also took some wrapped syringes.

He met Lewis at a nearby restaurant, where they had arranged to meet after parting company at the shopping centre, and they returned to the Gorge Road motel which was also occupied by Ms. Jolin and Ms. Knight.

LaForest said he tried some opium tincture, felt sick, and took some demerol to counteract it. Then he started sorting out the drugs which were spread on a bed.

Lewis didn't find out about the drugs until that time, he said.

He said he showed the pills to everyone in the motel room and wasn't finished sorting them when the police burst in.

Cross-examined by crown counsel Gordon Macdonald, LaForest admitted convictions in 1971 for robbery with violence and breaking and entering with intent and in 1974 for possession of stolen property under $200.

He said two of the opened syringes in the motel room were used by him but he didn't recall seeing a third syringe.

Macdonald put it to him that the two men planned the break-in, did it together, and both carried the drugs back to the motel and sorted them out.

LaForest denied this and added that Lewis "wasn't there at the breaking and entering."

"And you and Lewis decided later you would take the blame for all this," asked Macdonald.

The Clean Cut Dr. Pepper 'Perfect for '50'

DALLAS (UPI) — "The few who think they have to have long hair are just bad apples," said Alvin Lane, a Dr. Pepper Co. vice-president, "and this company doesn't need people like that."

The soft drink firm has enforced a strict dress and hair code for all who draw a paycheque at its headquarters plant.

One employee is known to have been fired for trying to give the company an argument, and two others have resigned over the policy, which forbids leisure suits, beards and hair longer in back than the top of the collar.

"I think men should look like men, and women should look like women," Lane said.

Jim Ball, a public relations official, said the code marks the first time the firm has had a written appearance policy. Company officials have warned employees it will be strictly enforced.

The policy, started by company president W. W. Clements, has been accepted by most employees but not all willingly. One worker, who asked not to be identified, called it "perfect for 1950."

At an employee meeting Mary Gottschalk, a data processor, challenged the code as not consistent with the firm's youth-oriented advertising. Lane said he had no control over that image.

Later Gottschalk made copies of a story from a Dallas newspaper on the dress code, sent one to Clements, one to Lane and posted the two others on the employee bulletin boards.

Gottschalk was fired, for what her supervisor called "hurting Dr. Pepper's image" and for improper use of a company machine.

A coding clerk in the same department, Sandy Dixon, has submitted her resignation over the issue, and Gottschalk's immediate supervisor, Mike Gaskill, also has resigned.

"When I came to work for Dr. Pepper six years ago, I had short hair, but then, the rest of my peer group had short hair," said Gaskill. "But now my peer group has hair as long as mine. I look right to my wife, to my whole family, to my friends, and to the people I go to church with.

"The only people I don't look right to are the ones at Dr. Pepper."

MARK TRAIL

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

In my opinion, today's deal is one of the finest I have ever seen with respect to the functioning of the expert mind in the play of the cards. I imagine that most of the world's players, had they been occupying the South seat, would have incurred a two-trick set at their three notrump contract. When the deal was played, Mark Blumenthal, a former member of the World Champion Dallas Aces, fulfilled his contract.

The bidding:

Pass	3 NT	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead: Ten of ♠.

East overtook West's spade ten with his jack, which was permitted to win the trick. A spade continuation was taken by Bluementhal's ace.

It was obvious to declarer — as it would have been to any bridge player — that the club suit had to be attacked. The normal play at this point would have been to lead the club jack and finesse against West's hoped-for queen. And if West possessed that key card, dummy's club suit would become established.

As is evident, if declarer had adopted this line of play, he would have met an early demise. East's queen of clubs would have captured this trick, after which East would have cashed four spade tricks, sending declarer down to a two trick defeat.

But Blumenthal recognized that if the club finesse were successful, he would go down! Suppose, for example, that West had possessed the Q-x-x of clubs. On the lead of South's jack, West, in view of the dummy, would naturally play a low club. Although five club tricks would now be made, declarer would be unable to later return to the South hand for the cashing of the diamond king (his game-going trick).

So South seized upon his only hope: that one of the defenders possessed either the singleton queen, or the doubleton Q-x of clubs. At trick three he cashed the ace and king of clubs — and was rewarded when East's queen fell on the second club lead.

It now became a routine matter to take dummy's ace of diamonds, and return to the South hand via the club jack for the cashing of the diamond king. Declarer now came home with five clubs, two diamonds, one spade and one heart.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By SYDNEY OMARR

Astrological Forecast for Tuesday, June 1

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Rock bottom, hard issues should be faced, not evaded. Be specific, direct. You have base of support. Know it and speak your piece. You'll find that family supports you. A deal is closed. Property appraisal results in pleasant surprise.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Accent on movement, short journey, mail and telephone messages. Key is to be analytical. Piece together bits of information. Someone who cares for you has right to remind you of health, diet.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Emphasis on collections, home improvements, budget, costs, money understanding within family. Taurus, Libra and Scorpio figure in picture. You could obtain genuine bargain in luxury item. Strive for quality.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Lunar cycle is such that you make discoveries, awaken interest in your projects, ambitions. Personal magnetism soars; you're able to transform "dream sequences" into something real, practical, rewarding.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Check Cancer message. Look behind the scenes. You're getting more recognition in a quiet way from professional superiors. Know it and accept it. Capricorn, Cancer persons figure prominently. One who has kept feelings under wraps will confide in you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Emphasis on romance, creativity, fulfillment. You learn facts about what can be kept, what must be released. Key is to go to future . . . and to let go of past. Message will become increasingly clear. Aries, Libra could be involved.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Highlight creativity—stress independence, originality. Aim high refuse to sell yourself short. One who makes numerous claims actually feels "inferior." Know it and take what you hear with proverbial grain of salt. You'll understand!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Good lunar aspect promotes study, greater understanding of communications, written material. You're able now to interpret, to express, to communicate. A "symbol," which had been a puzzle, becomes crystal-clear in meaning.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be versatile without diluting principles. Your aims, goals are within reach. Your popularity increases. Social life accelerates. Dig deep and you could strike pay dirt. Matters of taxes, investments, affecting partnership are emphasized.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Accent on solidity, getting details straight and priorities in order. Legal documents figure prominently. Partner, mate wants some changes—and you should listen and study. But don't act too quickly. You'll see why!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You get results. Services improve. Vitality makes a comeback. Active people inspire you. Gemini, Virgo figure prominently. Work, health, relatives in transit — there are all in picture. Pacing now is most important. Avoid extremes!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Accent is on creativity, children, emotions, affairs of heart. Change, travel, variety are keynoted. Your own style is more important than usual. You get what you want because personal magnetism is heightened. Be sure you know what to request. You're likely to get it!

IF JUNE 1st IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are original, independent, restless, dynamic, creative, ruled by your heart rather than your head. Leo, Aquarius persons play important role in your life. You finish major assignment, task in June. You are delightful, "spoiled," charming and impulsive.

Charlie glanced at the check. "I'm not picking up the tab, but I'll pay a quarter of it and also one quarter" he said. "You two guys can fight over the balance."

"Okay by me," commented Oscar. "That leaves only 88 cents for eachof us."

What was the total amount?

(Answer tomorrow)

Friday's answer: The cubes of 1, 2, 3, 4, 9, 10, 12.

Safe to Plant Tuberous Begonias

On this last day of May it should be safe to advise the planting out of both the tuberous begonias and the bedding zonal geraniums. Last week several cool early mornings followed by strong winds delayed the idea, for these two summer ornamental plants are easily harmed by cold spring weather.

The reason is that we like to start them into growth before planting outdoors and the young leaves are not accustomed to temperatures between 2 and 10 degs.C. after being indoors or in the greenhouse.

In fall as the summer growth is gradually hardened by outdoor living and the gradual lowering of temperatures, both the begonias and the geraniums often continue flowering until Christmas in sheltered gardens.

Tuberous begonias are most satisfying for shady spots where the soil is good and dappled light reaches occasionally. The globular double flowers of brilliaht hues bring life to the dark greens around them.

When planting, be sure of the following points. One, provide a loose soil with lots of humus from compost soil, leafmould and a little well soaked peatmoss if short of leafmould. And don't bury the tuberous rootstock too deeply. And don't apply fertilizer at this time.

Another point is to allow space for foliage expansion without touching from one plant to the next. Air space between plants and all around the foliage when full grown must be assured. Mildew is caused by several allied conditions. One is allowing roots to become quite dry and then watering heavily on a cool day or evening, or a heavy rain does the same trick.

Another cause is traced to plants with overlapping foliage in a sheltered area without a good circulation of air, receiving water in cool evenings.

In fact, watering for begonias in this climate of cool nights must be done before noon at the latest. In climates of hot nights, spraying with water in evenings is considered a benefit, but not here.

In fact, no watering in gardens of mixed plantings should be done here in evenings. Hardy farm crops are a different story; irrigation is often carried out overnight with no ill effects.

Zonal geraniums are plants for hot and rather dry spots. Planters and tubs in full sun will flower all summer and fall if these old favorites are put in.

Use humusy soil in each planting hole to aid new roots to make progress, but again, no fertilizer at this time. Wait until flowering has begun and roots are active then give one weak feeding in solution; during July is a good time.

Although liking hot sunshine, the zonal geraniums will take a couple of hours of shade. And they need water when the soil at the roots begins to be dry, so don't neglect them.

The tuberous begonias and the geraniums need their fading flowers removed promptly to encourage the continuation of blooming. With these attentions, the sunny spots and shady nooks in the garden will be alive with color for several months.

10,000 in Albania Purged—Diplomat

BELGRADE (UPI) — More than 10,000 persons, including Communist party leaders and government cabinet members in Albania, have been exiled to agricultural villages over the past two years, according to western diplomatic sources in Yugoslavia.

There is no known specific motivation for the purge, which began two years ago with the ouster of Defence Minister Bqir Balluku, who was apparently executed. The sources said it could be a reaction to economic failures, pro-Soviet sympathy within the country or both.

"Paranoia is running rampant in Albania," one source said. "There is no clue to the motivation or what they are trying to accomplish. The purge is feeding upon itself—people panic and begin turning each other in."

Except for Balluku, those purged apparently have not been excuted, the sources said.

The sources also said the purge could be a cleansing operation prior to a succession in the leadership. The ousters may be affecting the army's top ranks as well.

Both Enver Hoxha, 68, the party's first secretary, and Premier Mehmet Shehu, 63, are ailing and there is no known successor to either, the sources said. Hoxha, a Stalinist-style dictator, has not been out of Albania in 14 years. Shehu has been to Paris for urological treatment.

The extent of the campaign may still exceed a similar one in 1966 and 1967 in which 15,000 persons were ousted, the sources said. The purge has included three members of the ruling politburo and six government ministers.

Trains Collide

TAIPEI (Reuter) — At least 23 persons were killed and 138 injured Sunday when two express trains collided near Chunan, Taiwan, police said. At least 35 of the injured were in serious condition.

HOW OLD IS ARTILLERY?

A birthday was celebrated last week on the flagpole atop Bay Strtet Armoury.

Flying with the customary Canadian armed forces flag was the regimental flag of the Royal Canadian Artillery.

The distinctive red and blue flag, emblazoned with a gold gun, was flown to mark the birthday of the regiment, represented locally by the 5th B.C. Field Battery.

An artillery officer, asked which birthday anniversary it was, wasn't sure. But, he explained, the Canadian artillery used the same date as their British predecessors.

"It was some time in the 1700s," he said.

Rifle Tested

NEW YORK (AFP) — Newsweek says the Soviet Union is field-testing a light new rifle that loads three times as many bullets as the Soviet army's standard AK-47 assault rifle. The magazine said the new rifle has greater hitting power and holds 90 cartridges compared with only 30 in the older rifle.

Confidence Vote Due On Budget

OTTAWA (CP) — The government faces a vote of non-confidence in Finance Minister Donald Macdonald's budget this week, but the Liberal majority in the Commons should be able brush aside the threat.

The vote on the New Democratic Party motion is due Wednesday afternoon at the close of the second day of budget debate.

Moved by Max Saltsman (Waterloo-Cambridge), the motion would censure the government for wanting to change the qualifying period for unemployment insurance benefits to 12 from eight weeks.

There are 139 Liberals in the 264-seat Commons compared with 95 Progressive Conservatives, 16 New Democrats, 11 Social Crediters and one independent. Two seats are vacant.

CURVED COCOON

A houseboat called the Curved Cocoon is serving as a demonstration of economical yet luxurious living at Habitat. It is a two-storey fibreglass dwelling.

ERRANT PLUMBING topped by a cushion made a suitable seat for a visitor to Habitat Forum when all regular seats were taken at one public session.

HUMAN EVOLUTION 'AT CRITICAL POINT'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said today man's hopes for survival lie in the ability to learn to love one another more "in a way which will require of us an unprecedented desire to change ourselves."

Speaking to the inaugural session of Habitat, the United Nations Conference on Human Settlements, Trudeau said we have reached a critical point in human evolution "in which the only path open to us is to move toward a common passion, a 'conspiracy' of love."

"The conspiracy of men with men and the conspiracy of the universe with an ever more just humanity: in this lies the salvation of human settlements and the hope held forth by Habitat."

Trudeau said the concept of international co-operation symbolized by the meeting of more than 130 national delegations was not new — "it has been present in our minds for many years."

But he said the massive growth in population which faces the world in the next few decades made the solutions to the problems of human settlements all the more pressing.

"My plea to you at the outset of this conference is to encourage that concept to descend to your guts, where thought can be leavened with passion and accomplishment can become a reality."

In 30 years the world's population will have doubled to 6.5 billion, he said.

"I believe it would be ridiculous to think and to act as if our numbers on this earth were not so great." These numbers were already creating overwhelming problems in "all aspects of our concrete existence."

"It is no use saying that the population will level off and even decline to a level which we would be tempted to call 'human'," he said. "Our numbers are destined to increase for centuries to come."

130 Nations Tackle Massive Problems

VANCOUVER (CP) — The curtain rose today on the largest United Nations conference ever as 4,000 delegates and observers from more than 130 countries tackle massive social problems amid an air of urgency.

The Habitat Conference on Human Settlements has power only to make recommendations to the UN General Assembly and national governments but observers say it can have a strong moral influence through bold statements on improving the quality of life for the millions without adequate water, homes and health care.

The official UN conference will be prodded throughout its 12-day life by anxious outside observers and organizations here for Habitat Forum and other unofficial meetings.

Habitat Forum, the parallel meeting of non-governmental organizations, began Thursday at a remodelled air base at nearby Jericho Beach. While the complex machinery of the official conference will cost Canada $14 million, Habitat Forum costs are less than $1.4 million.

After official opening speeches by Prime Minister Trudeau and UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim, delegates will study and debate three draft UN documents on general principles, international co-operation and national action.

They will be dealing with immense problems caused by rapidly-growing population and the explosive development of cities.

A symposium of leading world thinkers issued a statement Sunday warning that unless wealthy countries like Canada are willing to share their riches with poorer nations the world might face violent upheavals in the next decade.

And the symposium, organized by British economist Barbara Ward, demanded a moratorium on the spread of nuclear power generation. Miss Ward said energy conservation and development of solar power are ways of avoiding increased use of nuclear power.

The nuclear issue could be one of the hottest items in the Habitat Forum conference as the Greenpeace Foundation, a Vancouver-based environmental group, has organized a three-day debate on nuclear power starting Thursday.

The foundation has announced that the forum organizing committee has supported a resolution demanding a halt to construction of nuclear power plants and a gradual elimination of existing stations. The forum committee is preparing a statement on a variety of issues which it will be submitting to the official UN conference.

The Canadian delegation also will be facing pressure from native grroups and the non-governmental organizations to take strong stands endorsing aboriginal rights, consideration of more public land ownership and stopping spread of nuclear power stations.

Fred Jobin, secretary-treasurer of the Native Council of Canada, said Saturday if the council fails in attempts to gain recognition of aboriginal rights from the government, it will ask foreign governments to raise the issue at the main UN meeting.

Touchy political issues like the Arab-Israeli dispute in the Middle East and Chilean refugee grievances also are bound to be raised. Both the Palestine Liberation Organization and a Chilean refugee group have said they will seek discussion of their problems before the main conference.

Canada Might Have to Accept More People from Third World

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canada might have to accept more people from the Third World even if it means upsetting the neighborhood, a speaker at a Habitat Forum seminar on global populations said Sunday.

Dr. Apodicio Laquian, associate director of social sciences and human resources at the International Development Research Centre in Ottawa said Canadian immigration restrictions might be unrealistic in light of the uneven distribution of people in the world.

He said that with the large amount of land available in Canada, the country "may have to accept people from the underdeveloped countries who come knocking on the doors of Canada."

Habitat Forum is a non-governmental conference being held parallel to the united Nations Conference on Human Settlement which begins here today.

Antonio Carrillo Flores of Mexico, former secretary-general of the UN's population conference held in Bucharest, said it is important to remember that the Bucharest conference never suggested developing countries should be forced to adopt population control policies.

The sovereignty of countries should always be respected, but at the same time there should be greater international assistance when requested, he said.

Phil Claxton, president of the World Population Society, based in Washington, D.C., said Saturday that the countries of Asia and the Pacific, except China, have agreed to attempt to reach a two-child family average by the year 2000. If this happens, it would mean 1 billion less poeple than by current trends, he said.

'CAN'T RESOLVE ALL PROBLEMS'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Urban Affairs Minister Barney Danson, elected president of the United Nations Habitat conference, said today the conference has a chance to wipe out cynicism about the UN with positive efforts to solve social problems.

But Danson said at the opening session of the UN Human Settlements conference "we cannot resolve all of the world's problems here in Vancouver between now and the eleventh of June."

In a reference to political issues such as the Arab-Israeli dispute, Danson said the conference should leave some problems to the UN General Assembly.

Canada has long maintained that bodies like the Habitat conference should not deal with political issues like the Middle East problem.

The Human Settlements conference is to deal with such issues as water quality, housing and land ownership.

As conference president, Danson will guide deliberations of the 12-day meeting. He is also joint head of the Canadian delegation with External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen.

Coroner's Jury Finds Cyclist Negligent in Woman's Death

PARKSVILLE — A motorcycle with poor brakes, coupled with a drinking driver who was speeding, contributed to the death of a 19-year-old Parksville woman, a coroner's jury has found.

Katherine Kimmel was struck and killed by a motorcycle driven by Gordon Michael Ward, 17, of Port Alberni, the jury was told last week.

"The driver of the motorcycle was negligent in operating defective motorcycle," the jury told coroner C. F. Newcombe after hearing the evidence.

"Due to the evidence presented to us we also feel that excessibe speed and alcohol were contributing factors."

The jury also found that Miss Kimmel "may not have exercised normal caution" while crossing the highway.

Testimony at the inquest showed that the motorcycle belonged to Ward's brother, who had been working on the machine's brakes. He had replaced the rear wheel so he could move the bike, but the brakes were not operable.

Gordon Ward took the bike without his brother's permission, and since insurance on the bike had been cancelled for some time, he put plates on the bike that he says he found in the woods while riding a trailbike. The insurance decal on the plates had been stolen, RCMP testified.

On the evening that he and a friend left Port Alberni for a ride to Parksville, Ward said he had been drinking, although not heavily. He also stopped along the way and had a small drink at Cathedral Grove.

He told the jury how he had driven around Parksville looking for a party, but claimed that he could remember nothing between the time when he drove away from the junction in Parksville to the time when he woke up briefly in the ambulance on the way to Nanaimo. It was not until the next day that he learned he had struck and killed a girl at the intersection of plummer Road and the Island Higway, about 150 yards on the Nanaimo side of the Englishman River bridge.

Police reported that Ward had a blood alcohol level of .12, above the level generally considered impairment (.08).

Kathy Kimmel had had a few drinks at a friend's house in Parksville before she and Patty Robets hitch-hiked to the Arlington Hotel, Miss Roberts testified. At the hotel they met some friends, who later in the evening gave them a ride into Parksville.

John Thwaites testified that he and two friends, Mike Rushant and Ian Bryce, drove the girls into Parksville, and let them off, at their own request, near Plummer Road. The girls began to cross the highway at the point.

As he was pulling back onto the highway, Thwaites said he saw a motorcycle approachng at "at least 50 miles per hour," and as he looked in his rear-view mirror he observed the collision between Kathy Kimmel and the motorcycle, and then sparks flying as the motorcycle tumbled along the pavement.

Upon turning around, he saw in the headlights of his car that Miss Kimmel was lying on the road.

The autopsy report said that Miss Kimmel died of contusions to the head, internal bleeding, contusions to the head and lungs and internal bleeding, plus numerous broken bones. A laboratory test revealed a blood alcohol reading of .19.

Mechanic Evan Waddell examined the bike and discovered the brake shoes missing. Ward admitted at the inquest that he knew the bike had no back brakes before he took it out for a ride.

'Hellish Mess' At Heathrow

LONDON (Reuter) — Angry airline passengers swore, shouted, scuffled and fainted when they arrived at Heathrow airport and found themselves caught up in a stifling holiday crush.

"Diabolical," "hellish" and "horrendous" were some of the milder expletives used as thousands of travellers from all over the world left their airliners and found themselves crammed in a terminal designed to deal with only hundreds of passengers.

PASSENGERS TO SUE

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — A World Airways DC-8 jet airliner was impounded Sunday after passengers on a charter flight from London filed suit, complaining they had been caught in the middle of a labor dispute that increased their flight time by seven hours.

The 248 passengers, who said they would seek damages of up to $1,000 each, got a writ from the Rankin County chancery court to have the DC-8 held for payment of any damages that might be granted.

Passengers said they sat at the London airport for nearly five hours and were delayed more than two hours more at Bangor, Me., where they stopped to clear customs.

The dispute was in connection with a strike by 750 union members against World Airways, which is based in Oakland, Calif., and specializes in charter flights.

The passengers were on a nine-day visit to England when World Airways employees went on strike. The airline and unions agreed to allow the plane to return with its passengers to Jackson.

However, spokesmen said a lengthy wait resulted at London when World wanted to substitute a management official for a union employee. At Bangor, the crew was reported to have asked to return straight to Oakland.

Angola Appeals

LUANDA (WP) — The Angolan government has appealed to the international community for assistance in dealing with the needs of an estimated 700,000 refugees from the colonial war against the Portuguese as well as the civil war that has just ended here.

The main concern right now is the threat of faminine facing hundreds of thousands of Angolan peasants because of the destruction of crops during the civil war and the nearly total breakdown of the marketing system due to the massive flight of the Portuguese from the country.

The situation is described by Angolan and United Nations officials here as "serious" particularly in the war-torn north and in some isolated regions of eastern Angola.

It is expected to get worse in the coming months because last fall's flight disrupted the planting season and it is now too late to put in new crops.

Foreign relief officials and journalists who have recently travelled in northern Angola tell of seeing or hearing about the cases of near starvation and seriously undernourished children and adults.

Bank Blasted

PARIS (AFP) — A bomb explosion severely damaged a branch of the Banque de Rothschild in central Paris late Sunday. No deaths were reported, but a woman and a child were injured by flying glass. A anonymous telephone caller for a group calling itself the International Revolutionary Front said the bank attack was a protest against Zionism.

Bonner Plan 'Ruin For B.C.'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mike Jessen, president of the Scientific Pollution and Environmental Control Federation (SPEC) Saturday called for the resignation of British Columbia Hydro chairman Robert Bonner because his ideas could "cause unprecedented environmental, social and financial ruin to B.C."

Bonner has shown himself in a meeting with SPEC to be unwavering and single-minded in pursuing his belief that B.C. must prepare for a 9.2-per-cent annual growth rate in energy demand, he said.

The figure has been challenged by other government agencies but Bonner is unrelenting, Jessen said.

He pointed to Bonner's statements that the 30-per-cent difference between Hydro's 9.2-per-cent projection and the B.C. Energy Commission's seven-per-cent forecast "is the difference between the kind of life to which we have become accustomed and something near recession."

"Anything lower than that is near stagnation."

Jessen quoted numerous studies, including the federal energy department's latest policy paper to support SPEC's belief in the necessity of energy conservation.

Environment Minister Jim Nielsen, who spoke to the annual meeting, called energy conservation "a prime concern" but said that in his department "we really haven't addressed ourselves to that so far — there is no component in our department exploring that."

Bonner today defended Hydro's gross estimates for the next 15 years, saying it is easier to cut back if the estimates are high than it is to add on if they are too low.

He said it is difficult to anticipated how much it would cost to make up for underplanning.

Hope Over Air Pact

VANCOUVER (CP) — John Marshall, Pacific regional director of the Air Traffic Controllers Association, said Sunday that he is confident association members will approve a one-year contract with the Federal Treasury Board, as recommended by their national executive.

The proposed agreement calls for an 11 per cent wage increase and provides that the French-language issue at Quebec airports be delayed pending further study.

Results of the vote are expected to be known today.

'A TERRIBLE NIGHTMARE'

Swiftsure Tragedy

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

It came out of nowhere, a wave that seemed as tall as the mast, looming out of the pitch black night.

The 46-year-old skipper, Wilbur Willard, saw it first.

"We've got to turn into this one," he shouted to Gordon Aigner, 49, and John Tonan, 29, working on the deck beside him. He yanked the tiller hard to starboard.

Too late. The 30-foot sloop lifted into the towering wave, then slid sideways into the trough.

"Hang on," Willard yelled to the four people in the cabin below — his wife, Marlys, Greg Griffis, 24, Dave Williams, 28, and Jody Martin, 24.

A second wave, as high, as menacing as the first, caught the boat on the beam and crashed through the cockpit.

Aigner put his arms around the mast and clung.

"The rudder ... it's jammed," Hillard screamed as another wave broke over the boat and swept him from the deck. He is still missing and presumed drowned.

The next wave caught Tonan, knocking him into the sea, too.

That was how Griffis and Williams, two members of the all-Seattle crew, recalled events aboard the ill-fated Swiftsure racer Native Dancer off Bonilla Point, 60 miles west of Victoria, early Sunday morning.

In an interview in the Victoria General Hospital later that morning, they said it had all happened so fast, like a terrible nightmare."

One moment everything was normal. The next, chaos.

The impact of the waves dislodged the stove from the wall in the galley. A closet door and a bathroom door were ripped off their hinges. They said bolts in the ceiling gave way and cracks formed along stress points on the deck and sides.

Griffis was tossed face first into lifelines on the opposite side of the cabin. Williams grabbed a stanchion and held on. The two women were sent sprawling. There was water everywhere.

Trudeau listens to sailors' gripes

PM HEARS GRUMBLES FROM UNHAPPY TARS

ON BOARD HMCS RESTIGOUCHE (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau, in an hour-long session with about 100 enlisted men aboard this Canadian destroyer, heard complaints of personnel shortages, worn out equipment and boredom of carrying out routine fisheries patrols.

The complaints were voiced as the prime minister visited the main cafeteria during a tour of the vesel which took Trudeau and his family on an overnight voyage from the Queen Charlotte Islands to Powell River as he continued his five-day tour of British Columbia.

The men grumbled that there were not enough sailors aboard each ship and that the bureaucracy of the department of national defence never seemed to come up with quick solutions to their problems.

"Everything's always being studied," said one sailor.

"When can we expect an increase in manpower, sir?" asked another.

The prime minister said the goverpment had decided to keep increases in defence spending within limits as part of the over-all fight against inflation. He said senior defence staff had set their priorities on capital expenditures.

Trudeau said further spending on naval equipment was "somewhere down the road."

"Generals arent necessarily stupid, he said.

During the session with the men, Trudeau answered questions with phrases spiced with the odd salty adjective. He was told that "these kids are getting sick of doing fisheries patrols.

"A lot of guys joined the navy to travel and all we do is make fisheries patrols, said one.

"Were not going to spend $3 billion a year to send you guys on trips, retorted Trudeau. "If you want to go to Japan, I suggest you buy a plane ticket.

"We're not a world power. We dont have ships in the seven seas.

HERO DIES AFTER RESCUE

NEW YORK (AP) — Fireman Patrick Cleary climbed a 24-foot ladder to the third floor of a burning building Sunday, to bring down a trapped child.

He went up again and rescued the child's anguished mother.

Then he collapsed on the sidewalk and died.

Deputy Fire Commissioner Stephen Murphy said Cleary had worked on two fires Saturday night before arriving at his last call. He had been out on three fires Friday night, as well.

Habitat Begins

VANCOUVER — Some 4,000 delegates and observers rom more than 130 countries began to come to grips with massive world social problem as the United Nations' Habitat Conference on Human Settlements opened here today.

Speaking to Habitat's inaugural asession, Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau said the world has reached a crucial point in human evolution at which man's hope for survival lies in the ability to learn to love one another.

The official UN conference is expected to be prodded throughout its 12-day life by Habitat Forum and other unofficial meetings. Habitat Forum, the parallel meeting of non-governmental organizations, began Thursday at nearby Jericho Beach.

The official conference will cost Canada $14 million while Habitat Forum's costs are expected to be about $1.4 million.

In a speech this afternoon, Urban Affairs minister Barney Danson, Habitat president, said the conference has a chance to wipe out cynicism about the UN by making positive efforts to solve social problems.

Wage Curb Challenge Gets to Supreme Court

OTTAWA (CP) — A major constitutional case began today before the Supreme Court of Canada—a challenge to the legality of the federal Anti-Inflation Act.

At issue is whether the provinces or Ottawa have the right to legislate controls over income.

Legal decisions in the past have held that the provinces have the pre-eminent, right under their constitutional jurisdiction over property rights, as designated in the British North America Act allocating powers between the federal and provincial legislatures.

But Ottawa argues that it has the power under the wide federal power to legislate for "peace, order and good government."

The federal government opened arguments today, claiming that Parliament was well within its powers under the BNA Act when it passed the legislation to impose pay and price controls.

The federal brief argued that inflation last October, when the legislation was introduced, amounted to an emergency on the scale of war or famine.

Justice Minister Ron Basford asked the court March 11 to give an opinion on the validity of the anti-inflation legislation.

The request came as secondary teachers employed by the Renfrew, Ont., board of education challenged an agreement by Ontario to allow the anti-inflation board to decide what wage increases were acceptable for Ontario public employees.

Fire Out Of Control

Canadian Press

Light winds were expected to bring some relief later today to the Ignace area of Northern Ontario where a 47,000-acre fire continued to burn out of control.

Warm weather with temperatures between 25 and 30 C. continued today, although a drop of 10 degrees C. has been forecast for tonight.

Similar hot, dry weather contributed to the rapid spread of the fire, which started last Monday at Wintering Lake, near Ignace, about 160 miles east of Kenora.

BLAZE KILLS 3

POWELL RIVER (CP) — A family of three was killed early Sunday morning when fire destroyed a single-family dwelling at Gillies Bay on the west side of Texada Island. Killed in the blaze were Michael Hedley Evans, 32, his wife Barbara Lee Evans, 34, and her son by an earlier marriage, Allan Stesen Scarl, 11.

Ferry Strategy Under Wraps

Precise strategy of B.C. ferry unions in their dispute over layoffs and overtime was kept under wraps today pending resumption of talks with Labor Minister Allan Williams Tuesday morning.

Ferry crews have conducted strike votes—result of which has not been made public—and strike notice has been served effective as early as midnight tonight.

But according to union sources there is not likely to be interruption of service until the outcome of Tuesday's talks is known.

If there is agreement between the government and marine components of B.C. Government Employees Union as a result of Williams' intervention, it will mean compromise of the ferry authority's plan to lay off 420 members of ferry crews to achieve operating economies for the ferry system.

HARBOR BLOCKADE

VANCOUVER (CP) — Greenpeace and the Newfoundland Fisherman, Food and Allied Workers Union have finalized plans for a joint blockade of St. John's harbor to start in mid-June, says Rod Marining, vice-president of the Greenpeace foundation.

The two groups hope to stop foreign trawlers and draggers from fishing the continental shelf and pressure the Canadian government into declaring a 200-mile fishing management zone, open only to domestic fishermn.

Sonar Torpedo at Nanoose?

Details of a new sonar torpedo alleged to have been tested by the U.S. at Nanoose Bay were sought today in the House of Commons by Victoria MP Allan McKinnon.

The Tory member said on the weekend he would ask Defence Minister James Richardson what he knows about the testing of the sophisticated weapon called Captor, which sleeps on the ocean floor until triggered toward its target by the sound of an enemy submarine.

"There is no danger to anybody," McKinnon said today. "I'm just mildly surprised that the Americans would test a weapon as advanced as that in Canadian waters rather than at their own testing range."

The member said he understood the torpedo can be armed with a nuclear warhead, and has the capacity of making more than one pass at a target should its first launch miss.

Canada and the U.S. have a joint agreement for the use of the underwater weapons range at Nanoose Bay, where conventional torpedoes have been tested for about 10 years.

McKinnon said he was not especially opposed to testing of the Captor at Nanoose, but he felt the Canadian public should have been informed of it by the defence department. He also thought Canadian waters might not be as secure, from the American point of view, as their own testing facilities off Florida.

An executive officer of the U.S. naval torpedo station at Keyport, Washington, Robert Mellm, said he was not aware of the kind of torpedo referred to by McKinnon.

McKinnon said he had not confirmed whether Captor was being used at Nanoose, but he filed notice of his questions this morning at the defence minister's office.

KIDNAPPED GIRL FREE

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The Belgian ambassador's 16-year-old daughter, ransomed for $408,000, said she feels fine but during her four-day kidnapping "the feeling of being closed in bothered me."

Nadine Chaval was released late Saturday night by leftist guerrillas who took her from her father's limousine Tuesday as a chauffeur was driving her to school. The guerillas apparently had planned to kidnap the ambassador but he was not in the car that morning.

"Nadine Chaval is fine. She slept very well last night, and right now she's enjoying a glass of milk," said the girl, pretending to be an employee at the embassy when a reporter called Sunday. After admitting her identity, she said of her ordeal:

"I got to eat and drink, and I was all right, but what got to me most was the feeling of being closed in there, in that place ... It was a medium-sized place, but the feeling of being closed in bothered me."

Ambassador Chaval suffered what has been variously described as a mild heart attack or a nervous breakdown when his daughter was abducted and was still in bed Sunday, but his doctor said his condition was not serious.

A friend of the Chaval family said Nadine was left by her abductors in the Lomas section of Mexico City, near the Turkish embassy.

$20M Convention Trade Splits Ottawa and Hull

OTTAWA (CP) — Nestled side-by-side on the Ottawa River, the cities of Hull and Ottawa sometimes find themselves in an uneasy relationship.

For years, the Quebec city was regarded as the nighttime play spot after civil service-dominated Ottawa had closed down.

But recently, as Hull has buildings and payrolls that received a share of the massive federal investment in buildings and payrolls that have made Ottawa a modern, prosperous city, that relationship has been changing.

And with it have come some strains.

Only recently former prime minister John Diefenbaker was thundering in the Commons because he felt there was a move afoot to lump Ottawa and Hull into a capital district. There was only one capital — Ottawa — and anyone who wanted to change that would meet the fight of their lives, he claimed.

Convention promoters in the two cities now engage in a lively competition.

At stake are up to 300 conventions a year that bring in about $20 million — and both cities want their share.

Hull is planning a 70,000-square-foot convention centre in a revitalized downtown city core.

It is to be part of the second stage of the Place du Centre development and will be flanked by 1,000 hotel rooms. It is part of a federal plan to direct more growth to Hull than it has previously received.

In fact, by 1984 it is anticipated that 35,000 federal civil servants will be located in Hull, compared with only 3,000 in 1969.

This is part of what senior officials of the Capital Visitors and Convention Bureau call a simplistic decision to shift the balance of business activity to Hull from Ottawa.

"But they've forgotten to bring the business community into focus," Glen Moore, executive vice-president of the tourist bureau, complains.

Hull and Ottawa are moving toward becoming competitors for convention business without adequate consultation between them, he says.

The Ottawa officials are particularly annoyed because they feel their concerns were not heeded by the National Capital Commission (NCC) and the federal works department, which are financing part of Hull's new project.

Partly to counter this, the tourist bureau supported local organizations such as merchants' groups and the board of trade are campaigning for a convention centre in Ottawa. Ottawa convention facilities are divided among about five major hotels.

The Civic Centre in the city's Lansdowne Park is not an adequate centre for sophisticated conventions, Moore says.

The tourist bureau has prepared a major brief to regional government officials for the Ottawa-Carleton area calling for a 50,000 to 100,000-square-foot centre with separate meeting rooms and a trade exhibit area in Ottawa.

Without it, bureau officials say, Hull will gain an unreasonable advantage over Ottawa in drawing power for conventions and the Ottawa downtown core will suffer because of it.

Recycling Deal Made

TORONTO (CP) — Reed Paper Ltd. of Toronto has reached an agreement to market an Italian-developed recycling waste system in Canada and Britain, the company announced.

A company spokesman said that with this technology, Reed will be able "to offer a total refuse disposal service based on recycling."

$2.25 A SHARE AT THE ROYAL

MONTREAL (CP) — Royal Bank of Canada reports revenue after taxes of $82,128,000 or $2.25 a share for the six months ending April 30, 1976.

This compared with $72,352,000 or $2.15 a share on a smaller number of shares outstanding, for the corresponding period last year.

Balance of revenue before taxes was $145.2 million, up 3.9 per cent from the first half of last year.

The banks total assets stood at $26.6 billion April 30, topping the $26 billion mark for the first time. Deposits totalled $24.3 billion, up 16.7 per cent, while total loans were at $16.7 billion, up 15.4 per cent.

Balance of revenue for the three months ending April 30 was $34,732,000 or 95 cents a share, down 4.4 per cent from $36,335,000 or $1.07 a shar on a smaller number of shares, from the second quarter last year.

Chairman and president W. Earle McLaughlin noted the balance of revenue for the second quarter was also significantly below the record high level reported in the first quarter of 1976.

"This decline was the result of narrower interest-rate spreads in Canada as the tighter monetary policy followed by the Bank of Canada required us to fund unseasonally high loan demand, with high cost deposits; as well, non-interest expenses continued to rise," he said in a statement.

McLaughlin said he believed the bank was complying with the general terms of regulations on bank prices and profits announced by the federal Anti-Inflation Board following the first quarter report.

"Also, we believe we are in compliance with the compensation and dividend restraints which have been detailed and are common to all affected corporations," he said.

Canada Wins UNICEF Help for Tiny Tots

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Canada has won a quiet victory by persuading the United Nations Children's Fund to refocus its aims and give more help to the tiny tots of the underdeveloped world.

Canada considers that UNICEF, as it is popularly known, has been spending too much time and money on community projects and adolescent education. It feels that children under five are the real hope for the future and it wants to see more devoted to their care and feeding.

In the Canadian view, the period from birth to age five is the most critical stage in a child's development. If not given proper feed and care in that early growth period, the child never will reach his full mental and physical potential. No amount of aid 10 or 20 years later can overcome the deficiencies of early childhood.

Canadas speaks in the councils of UNICEF with some experience and authority. She has been associated with UNICEF since its inception and is the fourth-largest contributor. The Canadian government provides $5 million annually, plus another $5 million to $10 million in emergency relief, and non-governmental organizations in Canada put up another $3 million a year. That's a fair chunk of the current UNICEF budget of $90.8 million.

Canada pressed its point on child care in a working paper placed before a current meeting of the Fund's board of directors. The board said it found no fundamental diffeence between the Canadian intent and the current UNICEF program and therefore found it unnecessary to revise its policies.

The Canadian delegate, Norbert Prefontaine, who guides international welfare programs in the Canadian health department, pronounced himself "startled" that the board and the Canadian delegation could reach such "diametrically opposed conclusions."

Prefontaine pressed the Canadian position, pointing to scientific data on the early formative years of childhood and urging that formal education and other services to youngsters and adolescents be financed through other sources. The target population for UNICEF should be preschool children and their mothers.

"What the Canadian position does say is that UNICEF cannot forever be everything to everybody," said Prefontaine.

The board quickly reassessed its position and agreed that Canada was right; it was time for UNICEF to refocus its aims and priorities.

UNICEF now has programs in 103 countries, including 45 in Africa, 25 in Asia, 22 in the American continents and 11 in the Eastern Mediterranean. Of its $90.8-million budget this year, about $76 million will will go into assistance and the remainder into administration.

Canada wants UNICEF to get down to the basics of child care, such as teaching mothers how to look after their infants and seeing that children get adequate nutrition, clean water and injections to ward off disease. The care also would extend to pregnant women.

The UNICEF board felt that a shift in emphasis would leave gaps in the aid provided to the communities in which the children live.

SYMPATHETIC EAR ON RAIL

NANAIMO ZCP(— The B.C. Conservative MPs caucus offered a sympathetic ear to Cumberland Mayor Bill Moncrief when he presented a brief on CP Rail proposals to discontinue rail service to his area of Vancouver Island.

Howard Johnston, MP for Okanagan Kootenay, said the caucus recognized the problems for upper island areas if rail traffic were ended and its load was suddenly shunted onto the highways.

Johnston said the MPs felt the mayor and others concerned with the issue should have made greater use of the opposition in Parliament.

The cost of repairs to trestles would not be as high as the railway claimed when taken into consideration with profits made from land sales, he said.

Clerk Quits At Kelowna

KELOWNA (CP) — Paul Douville, city clerk-personnel officer, has resigned to take up a position as city administrator in Duncan, at the end of July.

He said the resignation was not a result of a controversy at city hall last year, but because of a "tremendous job offer" from Duncan.

Douville was suspended by city council Dec. 9 for tampering with a letter addressed to Mayor Bill Treadgold.

Treadgold resigned his post Feb. 3 when council refused to make public full details of the events leading up to Douville's suspension. He claimed such disclosure was necessary to save the remaining public trust in the city administrators.

Accept Profit Guide: Chretien

PENTICTION (CP) — Canadian businessmen should accept the new profit guidelines announced in the federal budget last week in order to bolster the public's confidence in the anti-inflation program, Jean Chretien, president of the treasury board, said Saturday.

He told the annual meeting of the B.C. Chamber of Commerce that acceptance of the guidelines by the business community would help to show the public that the anti-inflation program will bring all forms of income, including profit, under effective control.

"You are no doubt aware that since last October, profit guidelines have been considered by many to be the weakest link in the program," he said. "In my view, acceptance of the new regulations is the price which the business community must pay to ensure the widest possible support for the anti-inflation program."

Chretien said several features of the guidelines should commend them to businessmen — the dividend freeze will end Oct. 15 and firms will be allowed to increase their annual payments to shareholders by up to eight per cent.

The guidelines also include a minimum rate of return for all firms so none will be forced to hold its price in the face of an excessively low rate of return or operate at a loss.

Commenting on the budget, Chretien said it is a "time and patience budget."

He said with the budget the Canadian economy should achieve a real gross national product growth rate of five per cent this year.

He urged chamber members to have the confidence to "stay on the chosen course, steering away from the twin shoals of higher inflation and higher unemployment."

The minister said it is beyond the power of the federal government to restrain expenditures of all levels of government.

"The co-operation of the province and municipalities is absolutely essential," he said. "All the provinces should not just cut back on programs financed from the provincial treasury but also on those involving federal funding."

"The reason is quite simple. Transfers to provinces absorb about one-fifth of total federal expenditures. Effective spending restraint necessarily means restraint in transfers to other levels of government."

Mining Recovery Pinned to Taxes

PENTICTON (CP) — Recovery from the deep trouble the B.C. mining industry has been in recently depends on the recovery of world demands for Canada's minerals and rapid correction of taxation policy errors, Ralph Sultan, chief economist of the Royal Bank of Canada, said Saturday.

Sultan, of Toronto, told delegates at the annual meeting of the B.C. Chamber of Commerce that change in taxation policy, especially at the provincial level, is the most important of the two essentials for B.C.'s mining industry.

He said the trouble in the industry is well confirmed by statistics which show exploration spending down by 60 per cent in the period of 1972 to 1975 and new mine expenditures down 85 per cent for the same period.

Claims staking was down 85 per cent, free mining certificates issued to corporations down 65 per cent and certificates to individuals down 25 per cent.

"These are alarming statistics," he said.

The estimated return on capital for the metal mining industry last year was only 5.8 per cent, Sultan said. This was one-half the profit rate in 1974.

Sultan said total metal mining profits are down again for the first quarter of this year, contrary to the trend in most other sectors of the economy.

He said invested capital for metal mining could decline even further this year, to the five per cent range.

"We are not expecting an early turn-around in the Canadian metal mining profit picture," he said.

Polynesian Canoe Is Back on Target

HONOLULU (UPI) — The Polynesian sailing canoe Hokule'a, travelling across the South Pacific without modern navigational equipment, corrected its course Sunday to make up for excessive westward movement.

The change made it possible for the 60-foot, double-hulled canoe to reach its planned destination of Papeete, Tahiti, and may prove the accuracy of ancient Polynesian star navigation.

Position reports received the past week from the Hokule'a escort vessel, the Medtai, via the navy-marine Mars radio system showed the Hokule'a was heading too far westward to land at Tahiti.

The Hokule'a left Maui May 1 on the experimental voyage to test ancient Polynesian skills and canoe design.

Brill Tops Trials; Loverock Wins Two

QUEBEC (CP)—Debbie Brill learned a lesson last year that cost her dearly at the time but it could be of long-range benefit as she takes measure of the women's world high jumping standard.

The 23-year-old Haney, B.C., native, who turned her back on the sport three years ago, ensured her berth on the Canadian Olympic track and field team Sunday by winning the event with a leap of 1.89 metres.

It was just shy of her Canadian standard of 1.90 set earlier this month at a track meet in California where she's been training since January.

"I got a bladder infection last year when we went to Europe (where she first reached 1.89 in late June)," Debbie recalled Sunday.

"I started getting very tired and I wasn't in contact with my body. I just passed it off as fatigue—usually I'm very high — and ignored it for about two months."

Her ignorance of the ailment was costly. Debbie claims she never was right for the rest of the year and, while she will not admit it, proably cost her a medal at the Pan-American Games in October.

She felt the same symptoms coming on just before her Canadian record-setting performance in California.

"I've been taking medication for about two weeks now. It upset my training schedule a bit, but not that much where it's going to affect my performances."

Best individual performance of the two-day trials here was turned in by Vancouver sprinter Patty Loverock who won the women's 100 metres Saturday (10.2 seconds) and the 200 Sunday in the Canadian record time of 22.6 seconds.

She lopped almost a full second off her previous best performance in the 200 and both she and Joanne McTaggart of Saskatoon (22.8) surpassed the old standard of 23.1 held by Marjorie Bailey of Vancouver.

Both Loverock and Bailey equalled the 100-metre record of 11.1, set last week by Bailey in California, while winning their semi-final heats Saturday.

Other double winners on the weekend were pentathlon star Diane Jones of Saskatoon who won her specialty (4,507 points) and the long jump (6.31 metres) and Ottawa sprinter Hugh Fraser, winner of the men's 100 Saturday and the 200 Sunday.

Loverock, Jones and Fraser joined Brill on the Canadian Olympic track team.

Also making the team, by both winning here and either making the Olympic standard at this event or in a previous meet, were.

Brian Saunders, Toronto, 400 metres; Chris McCubbins, Winnipeg, 10,000 metres; Richard Rock, Toronto, long jump; Ken Wenman, Surrey, B.C., pole vault; Boris Chambul, Toronto, discuss; Grant McLaren, London, 5,000 metres; Daniel Taillon Montreal, 110-metre hurdles; Robert Forget, Montreal, high jump Bishop Dolgiewicz, Montreal, shot put; Margaret Stride, Waterford, Ont., 400 metres, Lucette Moreau, Montreal, discuss; Joan Wenzel, Waterloo, Ont., 800 metres.

Four Victoria athletes participated here but may have to compete in another trial meet in Montreal June 12-13 in order to qualify for the Olympic team.

Murray Keating won the hammer throw Saturday with a toss of 67.20 metres—almost five metres better than runnerup Scott Neilson of New Westminster but still fell 2.8 metres short of the qualifying figure of 69 metres.

Sprinter Joyce Yakubowich, Tom Griffin and Dave Weicker all turned in second-place performances.

Yakubowich, a double gold-medal winner in the last Pan-American Games, finished eight-tenths of a second behind Ontario's Marg Stride in the 400 metres.

Joyce, bothered by a minor ankle injury during pre-meet training, had a time of 54.7 seconds.

Neither Griffin nor first-place finisher Richard Moss of Ontario hit the Olympic qualification figure in the men's 800. Moss made it in 1:49.7, 1.7 seconds off the required figure, while Griffin's time was 1:51.2

Joe Sax of Ontario beat Weicker in the 3,000 steeplechase. Sax's time was 9:01.2 compared to Weicker's 9:15.1.

Victoria's Gordon Stewart did not compete in the decathlon, which was won by Zenon Smiechowski of B.C. There was no report on Phil Olsen of Nanaimo who previously had bettered the Olympic standard for the javelin.

Three New Faces In Boxla Offices

Officials of the Western Canada Junior Lacrosse League created two new executive positions "to relieve the commissioner of some of his responsibilities" said Bob Reid, general manager of Victoria McDonalds, following a meeting in Vancouver at the weekend.

Ron Phillips, general manager of Richmond Roadrunners, was named chairman to "co-ordinate between the commissioner and the league directors" and Jim Barr of Burnaby was appointed treasurer, which was previously the commissioner's responsibility.

Harry Wooley of Delta, who was "Mr. Lacrosse" in B.C. during 1974, was appointed interim commissioner for the remainder of this year after Fred Zinn tendered his resignation to take up a new job in Kelowna.

Reid said the new positions would enable the commissioner to devote more time to league promotion.

Meanwhile, Roadrunners dropped two games at the weekend.

The Richmond club lost 22-11 to host Burnaby Cablevision on Sunday after being beaten 16-11 by visiting Coquitlam J-Hawks on Saturday.

Ferguson Cracks Cedar Hill Record

Tom Moryson and Cec Ferguson have known each other since they were 13-years-old.

But that's not the reason they shared Sunday's glory in the annual Labatt's Cedar Hill Open golf tournament.

Consistency did it for Moryson. The 26-year-old professional from Pitt Meadows won the big prize with a pair of one-under-par 63 rounds and a 36-hole total of 126 that was worth $750.

Warmer weather was appreciated by Ferguson. The Vancouver Island Open champion from Gorge Vale and also 26, Ferguson, rebounded from an embarassing 10-over-par 74 Saturday to blister the Saanich municipal course with a record round Sunday.

An amateur, Ferguson cut loose with a birdie binge to score 29-28—57 and establish a new mark at Cedar Hill. The former record was 58, shared by professionals John Morgan and Vaughan Trapp.

It was the second course record established by Ferguson this year. He carved out a six-under 66 at Glen Meadows on his way to winning the City Intermediate championship earlier this year.

Ferguson also holds the us-official course record at his home club — a seven-under-par 64.

"I just wanted to show that I can play in good weather," quipped Ferguson after Sunday's round. The 74 he scored Saturday (17 more strokes than he took Sunday) was achieved in miserable conditions.

"Actually, I'm not unhappy with the way I played Saturday. I thought I hit the ball very well," said Ferguson, "but just wound up taking too many strokes."

Ferguson's card Sunday included a bogey five when he three-putted the third hole, nine pars and eight birdies.

Moryson, who campaigned on the Canadian tour until he took the pro's job at Pitt Meadows, finished three strokes ahead of Kelowna's Dave Barr and Morgan.

Cedar Hill's Greg Barnes, who scored 66-64—130 to finish a stroke ahead of Ferguson, was the low amateur while clubmate Bill Bond won the handicap championship and the John Merriman Memorial Trophy.

A 20-handicapper, Bond put together a pair of 73s to wind up with a net 106, eight strokes better than runnerup Lloyd Stevens, also of Cedar Hill.
